GENOA CONFERENCE WILL OPEN UNDER THE MOUTHS OF CANNON AND FIGHTING MAY SOON COME

Armies Preparing For Hostilities On The Russian And Italian Frontiers, In Turkey, Central Europe And India As Effort Is Made To Patch Up Peace—France Preparing For A New Coup In Germany—Lloyd George, The Hope Of Britain, In The Weakest Position He Has Occupied In Any International Gathering—Italy In A Quandary

BY EUGENE J. YOUNG

As the statesmen gather at Genoa to patch up a peace for Europe and Western Asia, armies make ready for operations which might break up all their plans. The Arms Congress at Washington dealt with no problem which had in it the possibilities of immediate war; and so the way was found to compose the most serious disputes. The delegations at Genoa, however, will meet practically under the mouths of cannon; with the knowledge that any error in the treatment of some of the questions will set the guns to talking.

I do not wish to be unduly alarmist or pessimistic, but here are certain factors that will enter largely into the game of statesmanship—and the trading—as the delegates and their propaganda departments endeavor to make the world think that all is well:

1. Russia is mobilizing her army on the frontiers of Roumania, Poland and the Baltic States. More or less close to these borders, on the other side, Baron Wrangel, Gen. Savinkoff and other leaders of the Russian bourgeosie and monarchists, are quietly mobilizing anti-Red forces, making ready for a campaign this spring and summer if conditions should be favorable. Trotsky returns from an inspection of his forces to utter a warning that is prepared to act against the enemies of the Soviet and to

"Garryism" Dominates Coal Operators Of Pennsylvania And Southern Ohio

LABOR ON DEFENSIVE

NEW YORK, April 8—Before leaving New York tonight for Indianapolis, Ind., from which city he is to direct the nation-wide coal strike, John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, declared that the enthusiasistic support o fnon-union men in all the coal sections o fthe country means absolute victory for the miners.

Mr. Lewis, who has been attending the negotiations between the anthracite coal operators and the miners' representatives, which have been held at the Union League Club for the past thre weeks also stated emphatically that the miners would not consider any reduction in wages.

(By LAURENCE TODD)

WASHINGTON, April 8. — Nationalization of mines went a step forward when the bituminous operators refused to enter a conference for settlement of the nation-wide coal strike extended by the house committee on labor.

About 70 per cent of the production in the central competitive field is represented by the operators' associations and bgi independent operators outside

CYCLONIC WINDS SWEEP PARTS OF WESTERN STATES

DALLAS, Tex., April 8 — Heavy winds of cyclonic velocity and rainstorms swept north Texas and southern Oklahoma early eoday causing the death of 25 persons and immense property loss according to meagre reports received here. Tornadoes were reported at Cisco where Mrs. Turner was fatally injured and one other woman is in a serious condition.

At Ardmore, Okla. it was reported 14 persons had lost theid lives; Wichita, Falls, Ranger and other towns in north Texas reported heavy wind and rain.

Ballinger, Texas, reported six people killed and Dothan, in Eastland-co reported a cloud burst. The Millings Sanitarium at Cisco was completely wrecked but no loss of life reported.

Brownwood reported a cyclone near Rowena. Runnells-co 14 persons killed and much property damaged.

AMUNDSEN STARTS NORTH ON MONDAY

NEW YORK, April 8—Captain Raold Amundsen, famous Norwegian explorer and discoverer of the south pole will begin the first stage of his new artic expedition at six o'clock Monday morning when he will set out from Central park, Long Island for Seattle by airplane.

At Seattle Capt. Amundsen will join his exploration ship, the Maude, which will leave about June 1 to drift past the north pole thru the Artic ocean.

Two pilots, one a Norwegian, will accompany the explorer on his cross country flight and also on the Arctic trip.

Two Operated Upon

Lena Grace, daughter of Harvey Grace, Roscoe, was operated upon at Dr. J. G. Smailes' office Saturday for the removal of tonsils and adenoids.

WORRY CITED AS CAUSE OF BRAIN ILL BY DOCTORS

Valentine Huprich, 45, of Fresno, Route 4, was adjudged insane Saturday morning following an examination by Drs. Lister Pomerene and J. G. Smailes, in probate court. He will be taken to the Massillon asylum the first of next week, it was announced.

The record of the physicians' inquest gave worry as the cause of the man's insanity.

That the idle gossip of other people had contributed to the man's insanity, was the burden o fa story being told Saturday, in connection with the case. It was brot out by officials Saturday that 11 years ago, a man insulted Mrs. Huprich in her home by suggesting improper relations. The incident was kept from her husband, but recently in some manner, it is said to have reached his ears. Since then he has apparently brooded over the story, and it, with embellishments attached by idle gossips, has literally driven him insane, according to the story.

It was rumored Saturday that the case might lead to a suit for damages on the grounds of slander, against some of the alleged gossips. It is known that members of the Huprich family consulted a local attorney, with such intentions, Saturday.

STATUTORY CHARGE IS BROT AGAINST ROUTE 5 RESIDENT

The case of Clifford Keifer, Coshocton Route 5, charged with contributing to the delinquency of Mary Parks, 16, daughter of Guy Parks, Coshocton Route 5, will be reopened in probate court Monday or Tuesday, Judge Milo C. Ely announced Saturday.

Several witnesses were called during the past week, and testimony was taken in the case.

The charge was filed against Keifer by Guy Parks. He is charged with contributing to the delinquency of the girl "by acting in an indecent maner in her presence by exposing his person and attempting to have sexual intercourse with her."

Keifer is married.

Arbuckle Case Is Nearing Last Chapter

SAN FRANCISCO, April 8.—When the state completed its rebuttal in the Arbuckle trial the defense announced it would be able to finish by noon Monday or by afternoon Monday at the latest.

In the event the defense finishes its sur-rebuttal evidence by Monday, the case probably will be in the hands of the jury late Tuesday afternoon.

ASSOCIATION HONORS RETIRING MEMBER AT SUMPTUOUS BANQUET FOR 158 CO-WORKERS

O. P. McGinnis, For 54 Years In Pennsylvania's Employ Wins High Tribute

GIFT, RESPECT'S TOKEN

Associates Gather At Park Hotel Saturday Night For Fitting Farewell

Recourse to the words of poets was found necessary to describe the characteristics of Oliver P. McGinnis, retiring Pennsylvania freight agent, by the speakers at the banquet in his honor at the Park hotel Saturday evening.

The banquet was attended by 158 members or former members of the Agents Association. It was the first banquet of its kind to be held in any town other than Pittsburgh and was better attended than the most recent banquet held there.

As a token of respect and admiration from the agents of the Pan Handle division of the Pennsy system, for which McGinnis worked 54 years, a gold watch chain and fob was presented him. The presentation was made by William A. Love of Pittsburgh. The charm attached to the chain was in the shape of a cross and crown. In describing the cross, Mr. Love spoke of it as representing love and loyalty, two virtues displayed most prominently by Oliver P. McGinnis.

I. D. Webner, local ticket agent, delivered the address of welcome to the many out of town guests. Toastmaster Love then called upon Judge S. H. Nicholas, a life long friend of O. P. McGinnis.

Judge Nicholas, referred to a remark of I. D. Webner's that the Pennsy was the "best system on earth." He stated that it was not the man who manipulated the stocks of that company in Wall Street, that had made it the "best" but the man who heard the call of duty.

"My friend here," indicating Mr.

WIFE IS SHOT FOR REFUSING TO LIVE WITH HER HUSBAND

ZANESVILLE, April 8. — Mrs. Harry Morgan is in Good Samaritan hospital in a critical condition as a result of being shot late yesterday afternoon by her husband, Harry Morgan, ex-soldier who afterwards turned the gun on himself.

Morgan is also in Good Samaritan hospital but is expected to recover unless complications develop. The shooting followed the refusal of Mrs. Morgan to again live with her husband, following a separation in Columbus about six weeks ago.

After being taken to the hospital, Morgan was frustrated in a second attempt to comit suicide, when a nurse found a two-ounce bottle of carbolic acid between the sheets and mattress of his bed.

AMERICAN CAPITAL TO GET CHANCE AT MESOPOTAMIAN OIL

LONDON, April 8.—Altho refusing to make a definite statement, Sir John Cadman, chairman of the inter-allied petroleum council, indicated tonight that the granting of exploration rights to the Standard Oil Company in Palestine is the first step in Great Britain's plan to open to Mesopotamian oil fields to Americans.

Fair Board Meets

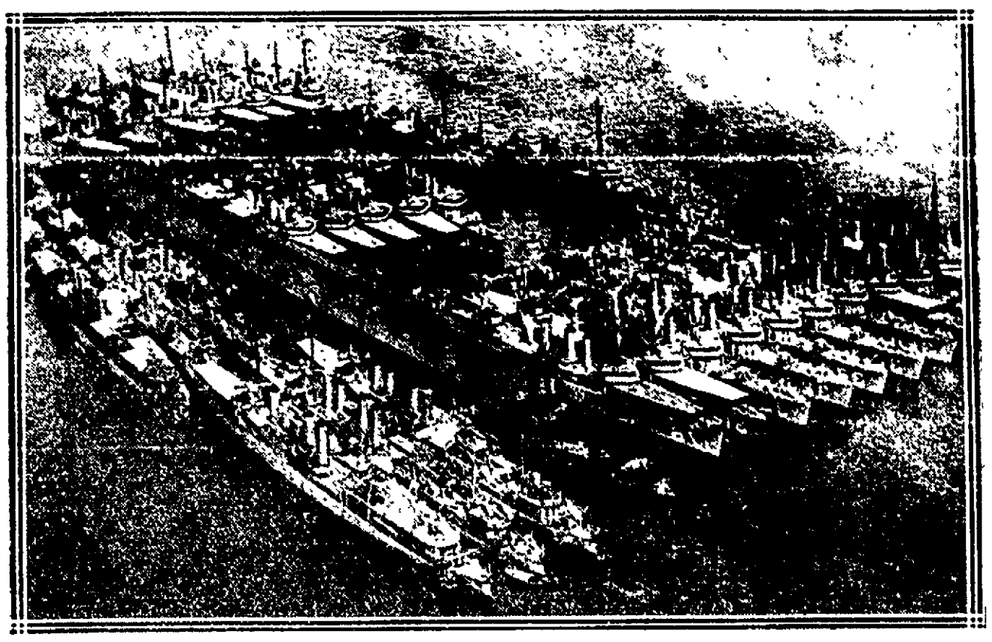
No new business was taken up at the meeting of the Coshocton-co fair board, which was held at the office of W. B. Miller, secretary, Saturday.

Some of the previously approved plans for the coming fair were discussed, and the meeting was adjourned early.

Is Operated Upon

Daniel Barcroft, of Coshocton route 2, underwent a major operation at the City hospital, Saturday. The operation was performed by Dr. J. W. Shaw, Dr. E. M. Wright and Dr. L. C. McCurdy.

VANISHING GREYHOUNDS OF UNCLE SAM'S GREAT FLEET



Because there is a shortage of funds for operation of the United States Navy, one hundred and fifty destroyers, "greyhounds of the sea," are to be taken out of commission. Sixty-eight of the vessels will be docked at San Diego, Cal., as shown in this remarkable airplane picture, while eighty-two will be berthed at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF OKLAHOMA SLAYING SLOWLY DEVELOPED

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 8 —A dramatic description of the scene in the home of the former Justice Jean P. Day at 3 o'clock this morning when Lieut. Col. Paul Ward Beck was shot to death by Day, who claims he fired the fatal shot by accident while protecting his wife's virtue, was given an inquest Saturday afternoon by Policeman Joseph Cambell, the first witness.

"Mrs. Day was kneeling beside Beck's body when I entered the room" said Cambell. "She was hysterical. I don't quite know what she was saying, but she seemed to be pleading with Beck to speak to her," continued Cambell.

"There was blood on her arms and hands and on the front of her dress. She was crying out something about her honor and sobbing and saying she wanted to die. I don't remember her exact words. She had her shoes off and was in her stocking feet. I washed the blood off her arms," concluded Cambell.

CITY WATER RENT BILLS READY FOR 3,000 CONSUMERS

Several hundred of the 3,000 water rent bills to be sent over the city this April were mailed from the offices of W. H. Williams, city auditor, Saturday The remainder will be mailed the first of the coming week.

FLOOD THREATENS LEVEE AND TOWN

BEARDSTOWN, Ills., April 8—Increased fears were felt today that the levee protecting one side of the city from high waters of the Illinois river would break when the water reached the highest point on record.

An all night rain had the river in constant rise, gaugers said.

More than 100 families have moved to high points in the center of the city.

Tents furnished by the state and city are being used for housing those in the low parts of the city.

Flood warnings have been issued to all persons in the neighborhood of the levee.

Two hundred workmen are piling sand bags and other supports behind the levee.

A break in the levee would dirve hundreds from their homes with heavy death toll, and property loss.

Fruit Crop Needs Only Lack Of Cold To Be Bumper One

If Jack Frost will only stay away a bumper crop of fruit will be gathered in Coshocton-co, according to local horticulturists.

Peach, plum and cherry trees are budding. Records kept over a long period of years show the first blooming dates to be April 13 to 28. Apple trees usually bud between April 15 to 20 in this county.

SEARCH WILL BE RESUMED SUNDAY FOR ODER'S BODY

Another search for the body of James Oder, who disappeared Monday, March 21, from the A. J. Randles home south of town, where he had been staying, will be started early Sunday morning by a searching party composed of Lee Phillips, Floyd Courtright, Joseph Guenther, and Richard Wells.

The men will put boats in the Muskingum river at Jack Randles' bridge, where Oder is thot to have jumped into the river, and row down stream as far as Dresden. They plan to drag the river and to search the banks.

Doubt that Oder ever jumped into the river has been expressed frequently since the long search of the river following his disapaeprance proved unsuccessful.

CLYDE OVERHOLT BUYS SCHOOLHOUSE AT PUBLIC AUCTION

The Mud school building, which is located a mile north of Keene, near the home of William Whittemore was sold Saturday afternoon to Clyde Overholt, who lives near Keene.

The building was purchased for $145. It was auctioned off by Vernon Casey.

The dimensions of the building are 28 feet by 24 feet.

For the past four years the building has been abandoned.

JUDGE FINDS THE LAW IS ENFORCED

PITTSBURGH, Pa, April 8—Judge Charles L Bartlett, of Detroit, who recently sentenced John Duvall Dodge, son of the millionaire auto manufacturer to serve five days in the house of correction at Detroit for auto speeding, today wound up in police station here charged with violating the traffic laws. Judge Bartlett posted a $50 forfeit and was released for a hearing Monday.

It was explained that he had told his chauffeur to "step on her" and violate as many Pittsburgh traffic laws as could be safely done in order to see if the local officers were on the job. They were and the first law the judge broke landed him in the police station.

All At Once Like Proverbial Bubble

Like Oliver Wendell Holmes' One Hoss Shay, Ivan Shaw's milk wagon was a total wreck Saturday without apparent cause. It fell to pieces near the Balch mill, enroute to Coshocton with a load of milk.

"It wasn't a hundred years old, but it must have been near it," said Shaw as he contemplated the catastrophe.

SUCCESS OF STRIKE EXCEEDS ALL HOPES IN NON-UNION COAL

ALTOONA, Pa., April 8—Success of the strike movement among the non-union members of central and western Pennsylvania is passing all expectations.

More than 33,000 non-union men have walked out and half of the Pennsylvania mines on which the employers depended for crushing the strike are already shut down. Most amazing of all has been the strike sweep thru Fayette county where the great Connorsville coking region is located.

All but one of the H. C. Frick mines there are idle and most of the other mining operations on which the Pittsburgh steel interests depended are ceasing to function. In the neighboring county of Westmoreland, several thousand of workers have taken their tools from undergound and joined in this biggest of all American coal strike.

Somerset and Cambria counties are springing new surprises on the operators every day. When the last of the 5,000 men from the Berwind-White mines around Windber on the border of Cambria and Somerset counties walked out in their first real strike since 1906 a mighty blow was struck at the non-union forces.

Five thousand there means as much as twice that number from most other places, for these mines have been in continuous operation for these mines have been in continuous operation and the output per man has been very large.

BOY PREACHER, OF ROSCOE SUBMITS TO OPERATION SATURDAY

Carl Hoop, aged 12, the son of Mr and Mrs Charles Hoop, of Roscoe, and who is widely known as one of the youngest preachers, underwent an operation at the City hospital Saturday for the removal of his appendix. Dr. J. W. Shaw, Dr. L. C. McCurdy and Dr. H R McCurdy performed the operation.

HOUSE PARES NAVY APPROPRIATION BILL

WASHINGTON, April 8—Disregarding the demands and insistent appeals of President Harding and his Secretary of the Navy Denby, the house appropriation committee in a bill laid before the house tonight recommended a slash of nearly 200,000,000 in the navy department's estimates for the coming fiscal year and provided for reduction in the navy's enlisted personnel from 101,000 to 67,000. The bill carries a total of $233,224,000, which members of the committee declares is sufficient to maintain the American navy at the strength authorized by the 5-5-3 ratio of the Washington conference.

Merchant Fined

C. C. Schmaltz, Fresno merchant, was fined $25 and costs in Justice D. W. Bassett's court Saturday, when he pleaded guilty to a charge of operating an auto truck without the proper license.

Schmaltz was arrested by John Brister, of Coshocton, inspector for the state auto department.

MORE MONEY IS NOT NEED OF FARMERS —SAYS BABSON

Reduction Of Credit And Currency Is Blessing Not Appreciated

BOARD IS PRAISED

Merchandising Machinery Of Country Is Badly In Need Of Oil

WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass., April 8 —Checking up the findings of his recent tour of investigation with the figures available at his home office, Roger W. Babson, the statistician today made a very interesting observation regarding our present supply of money. "Everywhere thruout the south and middle west" he says, "I found business men and farmers clamoring for more money and more credit. The cry is not a new one. Ever since we have had money, men have looked to the apparently simple formula of more money as a solution to financial problems.

"Witness Europe today for example. They have followed this plan—meeting each new emergency with more money and more credit. As a result the franc has fallen from 12c to 5c; the lire from 19c to 5c, the mark from 23c to 1-3 of a cent; and the Australian crown from 20c to one hundreth of a cent! Living costs have gone to ridiculous heights in these latter countries and everyone is much worse off than they were before the inflation took place.

"While this has been going on we have steadily reduced currency and credit. Our circulating media has been cut from $59.43 per capita—the figure for November 1920 to $50.27 in March 1922. This is fundamentally an improvement which critics have failed to realize. Fundamentally our finances are better than they have been for years.

"No, the farmer's trouble is not due to the supply of money," continued Mr. Babson, "but to the fact that our merchandizing machinery is temporarily out of joint. An increase of currency and credit at this time would boost living costs and make conditions worse instead of better. You cannot solve our economic problems by legislating prices up and down or by running the printing presses overtime. Prosperity is measured in goods not in gold.

"Our merchandising machinery needs oiling and cleaning. Distribution must be speeded up—middlemen who do not serve a legitimate need must be eliminated—freight rates must be reduced—in short, our channels which lead from producer to consumer which now wander about like cow paths on the general theory that the longest way around yields the greatest number of profits must be reconstructed on the cold mathematical truth that a straight line is shortest distance between two points.

"Incidentally there is altogether too much ignorant criticism of the Federal Reserve Board. This group of men has done a wonderful work during this trying period of readjustment and has stuck by its guns in spite of tremendous pressure and public demand for a "more liberal" policy. This single body of clear thinking men has done more to keep us out of the sort of economic mess that Europe finds itself in today, than all the rest of the country put together. They deserve your enbusiastic support."

Mr. Babson went on to discuss general conditions which are holding up very well in spite of industrial unrest. The Babsonchart index for instance shows general business is running but 13 per cent below normal as compared with 12 per cent below a week ago.

REED FILES SUIT FOR FORECLOSURE

James E. Reed has filed suit in common pleas court asking the foreclosure of a mortgage which he holds from Maro J. Valentine, on a 55 acre farm in Keene-tp

The plaintiff says the defendant delivered to him, five promissory notes for $500 each on March 28, 1917. The first note fell due one year after date, and the other four each year thereafter. The notes all bore five percent interest. The interest has been paid on all the notes up to March 28, 1922, according to the plaintiff's petition.

To secure payment on the notes, the defendant delivered the mortgage deed to the farm, the plaintiff says. He says the conditions of the mortgage have been broken by the defendant's failure to pay the principal of the notes when due.

He asks judgment for $2,500 with interest from March 28, 1922, and foreclosure of the mortgage on the farm to apply on the payment of the judgement.

George D. Klein represents the plaintiff.

COLUMBUS, April 8 — That the state treasury had $20,360,921, including $11,914,346 in the general revenue fund, at the close of business March 31, is the announcement made by State Treasurer Archer. Exclusive of schools and auto tag fees, state expenditures last month totaled $2,561,542, or $299,017 more than in March last year.

ATHENS, April 8—A hit with the hundreds of co-eds at Ohio University was made by Speaker Rupert Beetham, Cadiz, Ohio house of representatives, when, addressing the co-eds here he said that the dress of the modern woman makes the fair sex more graceful and comfortable.

"The new styles are simply indications of the progress of the times, and everybody must hustle to keep up with the times," declared Speaker Beetham, who is one of the candidates for the Republican nomination for governor.

AKRON, April 8—Does politics interfere with teaching a Sunday school class?

This question was put to Mayor D. C. Ryholt here today. It brot this emphatic response:

"It does not. On the contrary it is a help."

Mayor Ryholt, the only Ohio mayor, it is claimed, who is an active worker in the Methodist Episcopal Sunday school, has taught his class for 21 years. He has seen it grow from a few adults to an attendance of 340 persons each Sunday.

When elected mayor, he was told that the duties would force him to give up his class.

"No," declared Mayor Ryholt, "If it does, then, I shall feel disposed to quit being mayor."

"The office of mayor, rather, brings me in closer touch with the real needs of the community from a religious point of view. It affords a keener insight into just what is needed to reach the hearts of the men and women who go to make up the general run of a municipality."

Mayor Ryholt assigned the following reasons for continuing to teach his Sunday school class:

"I believe in the necessity for work in religion as much as in business, if one is to succeed. Religious ideals need to become working indeals. It is every man's duty to be a propagandist for higher ideals in his community. The influence of personal example. The consciousness of at least having attempted to do something worth while makes my own life more enjoyable. The work is a genuine pleasure. Work with adult classes should result in higher ideals in the home and, therefore, produce real results in the training of the coming generation."

COLUMBUS, April 8—The principal address at the Ohio State University's commencement exercises here in June is to be delivered by Congressman Theodore E. Burton, Cleveland, former U. S. Senator.

WOOSTER, April 8 — The Wayne county jail is empty for the first time in many months.

BUCYRUS, April 8 — Upwards of $800 worth of silverware, stolen from the home of Joseph M. Barrett, Fostoria, was recovered here by Chief of Police Trautman. Thomas Myers and Roland Shade are in the county jail charged with receiving stolen property. Carl Dalton, whose real name is said to be Arthur Goodman, Bowling Green, was arrested at Fostoria charged with the theft. Dalton came to Bucyrus shortly after the robbery, March 18, and confessed, telling where he disposed of the silverware, including some 150 pieces. The arrest of Myers and Shade followed.

DEFIANCE, April 8 — After being closed more than a year, the Defiance hospital was opened here this week to receive patients. Miss Daisy Parker, Lima, formerly in charge of the first floor of the Lima city hospital, has assumed charge here as superintendent. A lease, for three years, has been secured by a recognized hospital board. The Exchange Club has obtained pledges from citizens for a guarantee fund of $2,500 annually, to insure continued operation of the hospital which was closed last year, due to difficulties arising over terms of a lease.

ELYRIA, April 8—Altho, his wife said, he wanted to die, surgeons predicted that John Markovitz, Elyria, confined in the City hospital, Cleveland, will recover. He is suffering from a bullet wound, self-inflicted, over his heart. The shooting took place on a porch at 3471 West 58th street, Cleveland After walking from Elyria to Cleveland, without funds, Markovitz unsuccessfully sought employment.

His leg was crushed at the Elyria Foundry Company's plant in January, 1921. Numerous operations on the injured leg crippled him to such an extent that he could not obtain work, he said. Mrs Markovitz fell down cellar steps, was operated upon and confined in a hospital ten weeks, incurring an expense—$800—which took all the family savings, Mrs. Markovitz said.

BELLAIRE, April 8—John Moore, Washington, D. C. former president of the Ohio United Mine Workers, now legislative agent for the United Mine Workers of America, said Congressman B. F. Murphy, Steubenville, will present to Congress figures showing that the miner receives 79 cents a ton for Ohio coal that is sold in New England at $14. Moore declared that Congressman Murphy's speech will be broadcasted by means of the Congressional Record.

LOCKOUT WAS TIMED

This agreement coming nearly two years after the legal establishment of works councils in Germany and in the one British industry where the shop steward movement has really taken hold, was not found startling by the employers until unemployment had begun to weaken seriously the strength of the A. E. U.

The word "necessary" in the first paragraph of the agreement is the clue to the present dispute, and for six months the employers were content to interpret it in the same light as the union: "that before overtime is worked on production work it should be considered necessary by both parties."

With the increase of unemployment the employers launched their drive to kill the shop steward movement, to tie up the unions with an agreement which would prevent their exercising any industrial control and to reduce them to the plane of mutual benevolence institutions which they were 50 years ago.

In spite of recommendation by the union executive to accept these humiliating terms, ballot of the membership during January of this year gave a majority of 14,715 for rejection in a total vote of 85,765. Following this development lockout notices were on Feb. 25 posted by the employers, to take effect March 11.

The employers chose wisely the moment to strike. On Jan. 31 the ministry of labor reported that the percentage of unemployment in the engineering industry was 26.6, or a total of something over 100,000 out of nearly 400,000 unionists.

PRINTER CHIEFS ASK HARDING WHY THEY WERE FIRED

Chiefs of the Government printing office at Washington called at the White House to ask President Harding why he discharged them. Thirty-two men were let out "for the good of the service," the President explained. Senator Caraway, Arkansas Democrat, assailed the President for his action in a speech to the Senate. He asserted that the Chief Executive acted without legal authority in discharging the men. The first man on the left is James W. Wilmet, deposed director of the Government printing plant.

Dorothy's Odd Audience

By MALCOLM BROWN

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union

The wonderful afternoon had at last arrived. Dorothy Clifford was to make her debut as a pianist at Claridge hall, and Eustace, her fiance was to be there.

Claridge hall was not the finest hall in the city. It was, however, one of the leading centers of music.

Dorothy had been educating herself as a pianist for seven years. She had many teachers, too. She had hoped to make music her life career. But many a girl who dreams of a life career surrenders it when the right man comes along. And with Eustace to care for, the piano had become a less valued friend.

"Still, Eustace," she had said, "I can play once in a while at first, even after we are married, and make a few extra dollars. Don't you think so?"

Eustace had been dubious, but Dorothy's father was emphatically in agreement with her.

"You're going to give that piano recital, anyway, Dorothy," he said.

Dorothy's father was not very worldly wise, but anyway he had his will. And so the fateful afternoon arrived.

When Dorothy arrived with her father and Eustace and saw the placards in front of the building her heart gave little throbs of pride. "Dorothy Clifford," they announced, in great black letters, under her picture. "Dorothy Clifford," and then, in smaller letters, "gives her pianoforte recital in Claridge hall"—the last words very big again—"on Friday next at 2:30."

Eustace squeezed her hand and her father twisted his white mustache and strolled along as proud as a king.

"Room 4, Miss Clifford," they told her inside. So Dorothy had to say good-by to her father and sweetheart and hurry round to the musicians' entrance. She walked up and down corridors—for Claridge hall is quite a large place—and at last found room 4.

"They are waiting for you," said an old gentleman at the stage entrance—a little curtly, Dorothy thought. The house was full.

Dorothy walked forward toward the grand piano, which, rather oddly, she thought, occupied a corner of the stage instead of the center, such a salvo of hand-clapping broke forth that the tears came into her eyes.

She could hardly see to read the music that she unrolled and placed upon the stand.

The first part consisted of a Chopin nocturne. Dorothy sat down and struck the opening chords.

At first she was timid. It was her first appearance in public, and the presence of these strangers disconcerted her a little, but before she had played half a dozen bars she had forgotten where she was in the joy of playing, and, before she knew it, the piece was ended. Dorothy got up and bowed.

To her amazement there was not a single hand-clap.

Not one person out of that vast audience had been sufficiently impressed to applaud. There was not a whisper. They sat in their seats in stony silence.

Dorothy controlled herself with difficulty. She went slowly out through the stage exit. She would not go back. She would go home, she—

"Dorothy! Where have you been?"

It was Eustace, Eustace standing at her side. She tried to hide the tears that filled her eyes.

"Dorothy! This's the wrong room. That's Number 3. We have been waiting for you a quarter of an hour. The audience is getting impatient."

The absurdity of the mistake sent the girl into a reaction of hysterical laughter. To whom had she been playing, then? She would not yield now; she would go on the right stage and play her part. Otherwise—well, her father would have to pay back the box office receipts, and that would mean three or four hundred dollars, at least. Mechanically she entered Number 4.

And as she entered just as hearty a round of applause greeted her as before. But when she ended the house went wild with enthusiasm. "Encore!" they yelled. They called her back three times in each of the first two parts and six times at the end. And, as the papers said next day, Dorothy had "arrived."

"Who who were they, Eustace," she asked, at the first opportunity.

Eustace threw back his head and laughed.

"Dorothy," he said, "your first public concert was given before the National Association of Deaf-Mutes."

Thankful for Something.

Jimmy had long wanted a brother, so when twins, a boy and a girl, arrived at his home and he was told a baby sister and brother had come, he heaved a deep sigh and said: "Gee, I'm glad it wasn't all sister."

SOUTH PULLS

Pressure on Politicians

Politicians are being told that they needn't come around next Election Day if they are not doing their best to hand over Muscle Shoals to Ford. The legislature is being warned that it had better bend its neck to the yoke and pull for him, and the Governor of Alabama knows this. He has announced himself—right out loud—strong for Ford.

The entire citizenry of Alabama and Georgia—at least it is entire so far as anyone has been able to discover—have massed themselves together in a Ford boosting society. At a mass meeting recently held in Montgomery and another in Atlanta sentiment was expressed in enthusiastic terms.

There isn't any mistake about where the south stands, and, what's more, the south wants the world to know where it stands. Unless Mr. Henry Ford, the eminent citizen of Detroit, Mich., gets control of Muscle Shoals the south is very likely to vent its wrath somewhere in the neighborhood of a good-sized bunch of congressmen. The fact that Henry's offer contains some features that some congressmen do not like doesn't influence the folks of the south.

22 Billion Telephone Messages Sent in 1921

BUCYRUS, O., April 8. — There were twenty-two billion telephone messages carried over the telephone wires of the United States during the year 1921, an average of over sixty million messages a day ,according to the report of W. S. Vivian, of Chicago, vice-president of the Telephone Men's Association, speaking before the Rotary Club here on "The Service of the Telephone."

BLUE SKY SHARKS ON TRAIL BY CROOKS

COLUMBUS, April 8. — Officials of the state blue sky department are disposed to put an end to the practice of a number of stock selling companies, of selling the preferred stock and letting the promoters retain most of the non-par value common stock which possesses special value. This ruling has just been given by Attorney General Price to State Director of Commerce Phipps.

CONESVILLE MEN BUY FLOUR MILL

A transaction has just been completed, whereby A. C. Somerville, and Carl Lutz of Conesville Route 2 become the owners of the Dresden Flour Milling Co.

The mill was formerly owned by Lewis C Gray, J. T Taylor, and F C. Sommerville. Mr. Gray has acted as manager of the mill for a number of years He will retire from public business for the present.

The new owners are men who thoroly understand the milling business.

Mr. Somerville has bot and shipped grain for a number of years, and Mr. Lutz, who will act as manager, is an active business man in his own community.

Mr. Lutz and his family plan to move to Dresden about April 15, at which time the mill will go into the possession of the new owners.

BRICK USED FOR HUMIDOR

TILTONVILLE, O., April 8. — A novel plan for transforming his showcase into a humidor is utilized by Elwood Gosney, local cigar store proprietor, by a piece of "brick confetti."

Gosney boils an old-fashioned porous brick. Then he places it in his showcase. He is keeping his tobacco in excellent shape, he declared, by soaking the brick an hour or two in water once each week.

What Babylon Handed Us.

The new system of dividing the day into 24 hours, invented by the Babylonians, was adopted by the Greeks and since then it has been handed down from generation to generation without any alteration, because nobody has dared to change it. Even the French revolutionists, who introduced a large and elaborate series of innovations in the system of weights and measures, and went so far as to change the names and order of the days of the week, did not attempt to alter the day's division into 24 hours.

HOUSE COMMITTEE LEARNS MINE STRIKE FACTS

A probe of the nationwide strike of coal miners is being made by the House Labor Committee, looking to a solution of the differences between the workers and the operators. Seen here, right to left are Representative Nolan, chairman of the House Labor Committee; John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers; Frank Morrison and Samuel Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, and Representative Meyer London, of New York. The Denarius.

The word penny occurs a number of times in our English version of the New Testament, especially in the four Gospels; for instance, Matthew 20:2, "And when he had agreed with the labourers for a penny a day, he sent them into his vineyard." The coin to which the name penny is given, was the denarius, a Roman silver coin in circulation in the time of Our Lord and the Apostles. It was the principal silver coin then in use throughout the Roman Empire. From the parable of the laborers in the vineyard it would seem that a denarius was then the ordinary pay for a day's labor.

Make Your Doorway Inviting

The charm of an attractive entrance is not complete unless the door itself is kept in good condition. Many doors today are finished with a durable stain and then varnished. But unless the varnish is selected with care, so that it will withstand the rigors of outside exposure—beware the results in a few weeks.

Lucaseal Exterior Varnish

is made especially for all outside uses—on doors, pillars, water-craft, etc. It will not turn white, and retains its brilliant finish indefinitely. Its surface dries over night and thoroughly hard in 24 hours.

The Worthless Lover

By CALVIN HENDRICKS

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

Since Lucy Merton's marriage to George Gray, five months before, she had not sent any money to Frank Bennett, but she still went to the letter box at the postoffice to look for his letters. When there were none she drew a deep breath of thanksgiving.

Lucy Merton had lived with her mother in the little old frame house in Jouk, a flourishing city, where Frank Bennett wooed her. That was ten years ago, and she was a girl of twenty.

Frank had gone west—he was a traveling man—and came back periodically, and always the engagement was resumed. Lucy knew no other men; she was tied down to her invalid mother, and hardly left the house, except for shopping. And so Frank had no rivals.

Some women are like Lucy; when they love, nothing can upset their faith in their lovers' instinctive goodness. Lucy felt that Frank had never had a chance. About that time she began to lend him money—small sums, pitifully scraped together out of her scanty income.

So matters had drifted. At last Frank had gone west. He wrote home glowing accounts of his opportunities. Would Lucy scrape together as much as she could for him to invest in land? It was a splendid chance for both of them. Four or five times a year he wrote to her, and every time she sent something. She made herself believe that Frank wrote the truth. It was five years since she had seen him; but when he wrote it was always as her lover.

Then suddenly her life had changed. Her mother died, and she met George Gray, a young architect of the town. He wooed her persistently. In spite of her love for Frank, Lucy felt drawn toward her new suitor. Gradually she fell in love with him. This change of heart suddenly revealed Frank Bennett in his true colors. Lucy now felt that she had escaped from an intolerable slavery.

The Grays moved to a distant section of the town, and Lucy sent no more money. But for years she had a letter box at the postoffice, that her mother might not know of Frank's letters, and the lease of it had several months to run. Whenever she passed curiosity drew her to the letter-box, and whenever she saw a letter inside, she could not help taking it out and reading it.

Her first refusal to send money was answered with urgent pleas and promises of marriage. Lucy did not write again, not even to tell the fellow that she was married already. The next letter was indignant, the next abusive. Then threats followed.

She was seated upon the porch of her new home when a man entered the gate and came quickly up the path. It was Frank Bennett. Lucy knew him at once. He had grown much older and looked dissipated.

He ascended the steps of the porch, and, taking off his hat with a flourish, stood watching her.

"I'm selling books," he announced. "I have here—" he touched a package—"a complete guide for the housekeeper. It is very useful for young wives. Makes their husbands contented and keeps their love."

"I don't want any books," said Lucy in a strained voice.

Bennett, without answering, unfastened the package.

"One dollar down and one dollar monthly will give you full possession of these three companion volumes," he continued. "You'd better take them. Don't you want to make your husband happy? Don't you want to surprise him with—"

"I tell you I don't want any books," exclaimed Lucy indignantly, rising to her feet.

"You think you don't want them, eh?" sneered Bennett. "Then, I'm sorry for your husband. Maybe he's so well-to-do that he keeps a couple of servants and you just have to doll up and sit around all day? Now see here! I'm going to leave these books, and when you've thought the matter over you're going to buy 'em. I shall come back here tomorrow to get my dollar."

"If you're not out of here within one minute, I shall telephone to my husband to have you arrested," said Lucy. "Take yourself and your books out of here, and don't ever let me see your face again, or you shall be horsewhipped."

To her amazement, Bennett calmly picked up the books and began to go down the garden walk. He did not say anything nor seem indignant. He shut the gate behind him, and a couple of minutes later Lucy saw him entering the house next to her own, beyond the vacant lots adjoining.

All at once the explanation flashed on her. He had not recognized her! He had simply been trying to peddle books in his own characteristic, impudent way. She did not know the transformation that love had worked in her. It seemed a miracle. But she was free. He could not touch her now or hurt her again. A load of pain had slipped from her shoulders. And George need never know.

DEMOCRATS PAN HARDING'S ZEAL FOR PATRONAGE

WASHINGTON, April 8—Democratic senators made President Harding the target of bitter partisan attacks in the senate today when they renewed their charges that he was personally responsible for alleged infractions of civil service regulations in sweeping Democrats out of office and replacing them with Republicans.

Caustic criticism of the president by Senators Harrison, of Mississippi; Stanley, of Kentucky and Caraway, of Arkansas, took the form of personal denunciation of him and of Republican spoilsmen.

NEVER before has the amazing Knight sleeve-valve motor been available in so fine a car at so low a price. Europe uses the Knight motor in her most famous and expensive cars. Now Willys engineering, Willys quantity production, put it in the reach of all in a car equally famous, but far less costly.

The Motor

The Willys-Knight motor is the highest development of the Knight sliding sleeve-valve principle. It gets more power out of less gas than any other motor of its size and weight. It is free from valve trouble, free from carbon trouble, smooth, quiet, flexible. Scientific tests and driver experience show that it grows more powerful with use. And its life-limit has never yet been ascertained.

The Car

The Willys-Knight Car is especially designed to match the motor in long life and distinction. Graceful, refined, dignified, its sturdy steel chassis beats off jolts and jars and holds the body permanently free from rattles and squeaks. Vigilant springs translate the roll of the road into undulating ease. It is fleet, comfortable, responsible—and a sound investment.

2. Jugoslavia and Italy have both massed considerable military elements on their borders. They are again engaged in a bitter quarrel over Fiume which has led to minor clashes.

3. Turkey's Nationalist army, with fresh supplies from France and Italy, is making ready for an attempt to drive the Greeks out of Asia Minor. In Thrace the Turkish and Bulgarian elements are engaged in guerilla warfare that is growing really dangerous and might become a fatal factor for Greece if she should meet with disaster in an Anatolian campaign.

4. Hungary, encircled by enemies, has reached a state of desperation in which she is aching to take advantage of any troubles of those she blames for her plight. She is dangerous because she has the best fighting population in Central Europe. Already her irregular troops are renewing raids in Austria; while her partisans are stirring up much unrest thruout the whole Danube basin.

5. Lord Rawlinson, the British commander in India, admits he is disposing his forces with the idea that grave unrest may break out in the interior of the country and the Afghans may conclude to attempt an invasion from the northwest.

6. France is openly proclaiming that if Germany refuses to meet the hard terms laid down by the Reparations Commission, she will resort to the "sanctions" of the Versailles treaty by using her army as a collection agency.

And behind all these things lie conditions of financial and economic distress which call for desperate remedies; and which are bound to provoke bitter quarrels. The atmosphere at Genoa will be far from one of goodwill.

Bolshevik Threat of Force

There can be little doubt that Trotsky, as he moves his army westward, is playing hand-in-glove with the Soviet delegation. Their demand for full recognition of their government and for aid from the capitalism of the west in rebuilding their shattered economic structure is to be backed by the threat that they will take things if they cannot get other things peaceably. If Russia is to undergo further sufferings, the plain intimation is that she will see to it that she has plenty of good company.

Just what forces are being mobilized by Trotsky is not clear. We hear from British sources which are interested in painting things in bright colors, that Trotsky's army is no longer a formidable machine, that it is shot thru with rebellion and is sadly lacking in transport and arms. It is evident, however, that he is able to dispose of sufficient forces to scare the neighboring nations. Poland and the Baltic states, which were refusing to treat with Moscow a few weeks ago, have entered into some sort of arrangement for joint action on some questions at Genoa.

It is also to be noted that the Soviet delegation made it a point to pass thru Riga and Berlin on their way to Italy. They did this in the face of their strongly repeated fears that they were in danger of assassination on the way. It would have been simpler and safer for them to go from Odessa by boat—and either Italy or Britain would have been glad to furnish a good safe boat. But the advantages of going to Berlin evidently outweighed the element of safety. They had demonstrations of friendship from various factions that were not all Red; and they were thus able to convey to Poland the hint that Germany and Russia could get together if they wanted to and put an end to the independence of that country.

Acute Quarrel Over Fiume.

During the Paris Peace Conference we became satiated with the quarrels over Fiume, especially with the bombastic proceedings of D'Annunzio. So we are apt to pay too little attention to the highly dangerous situation which now centers around that city. In the chancelleries of Europe there is no inclination to minimize it. They know that Italy and Jugoslavia have both taken extensive military precautions; and there is a lot of dynamite lying around

The new quarrel is of a particularly aggravating nature, in that Italy has lost the support of the city's people; and their former leanings toward Italy were the sole support of its claim to the right to possession. The city was taken over by D'Annunzio on the ground that the majority of its population was Italian and was finally conceded to the "Mother Country" on that basis. And the people, at first, welcomed the new sovereignty.

But, in this instance at least, Woodrow Wilson had clear vision when he opposed the Italian ambitions. He knew that Fiume was dependent for its prosperity on the trade flowing thru it from Slav and Magyar peoples in the Danube basin; and that under Italian auspices, for reasons of neglect, or jealousy or enmity, this trade was bound to suffer.

What he foresaw has happened. Fiume has gone steadily backward until it is almost a ruined city. Italians could not or would not give it the trade it needed, they insisted on barring, as much as possible the old trade from the interior. High taxes to maintain Italian garrisons and adventurers have been imposed on citizens whose revenues were cut off. In consequence many of its Italian people have gone to the "Mother Country" to seek other conditions and many of those remaining want nothing so much as to be relieved of Italian control.

People's Will Overridden

Thus it has happened that the citizens put in power an administration which was friendly to Jugoslavia. Within the last six months this administration had made overtures to Jugoslavia for a return to the old trading conditions. This tendency became so obvious that it alarmed the Italian Nationalists, and they descended on the city to force it to remain in company it no longer wanted. Its duly elected mayor and legislature found it necessary to take refuge in Jugoslavia.

Now Jugoslavia is in position to assert that Fiume wants to be freed from Italy. A fair election would probably prove this contention. In the discussions at Genoa there is bound to be insistence that Fiume shall be permitted to choose her destiny and that the peoples of the Danube basin are entitled to their natural outlet. And, if they are balked, the Jugoslavs may not be content with mere argument.

Added seriousness comes from the fact that other big interests will appear in the debate. Hungary has been gaining much influence in the western part of Jugoslavia because the Croats remember their needs were championed by Budapest in the old days and they feel that Belgrade does not pay enough attention to them. A well organized movement among the Croats to throw off the Jugoslav "yoke" is headed by elected members of a "constitutional convention" which was overthrown by the Serbs. As inaction in the Fiume quarrel is bound to make the Croats still more disloyal the Belgrade government must put up as stiff a front as possible to pacify them.

France Has Big Plans

It happens also to be in the interest of France at this moment to help stir up trouble for Italy on the eastern frontier in order to keep her from interfering with the designs the Paris statesmen have on Germany. Thru the rejection by Berlin of the terms laid down recently by the Reparations Commission, the ruling powers in Paris see opportunity for putting into effect schemes for reducing German power which have long been blocked by Great Britain with more or less assistance from Italy.

The French member of the Reparations Commission makes bold to proclaim that his country is now strong enough to go it alone and force Germany to pay by military means. Premier Poincare and President Millerand have long been committed to the same idea. Unless they come against some combination of power big enough to restrain them they will undoubtedly make an attempt to advance further into Germany when default is made on reparations payments at the end of May; as will undoubtedly happen unless the terms are made less rigid.

If France acts, she will not stop with the mere collection of money. That country and Great Britain have recently been stirred by the publication of the memorandum which Marshal Foch wrote for Premier Clemenceau at the Paris peace conference. In it he set forth that the only safety for France and Belgium lay in making a firm frontier on the Rhine, with bridgeheads that would enable them to meet any aggressive move by Germany. There is no reason to believe he has abandoned the idea and Poincare and Millerand certainly share it.

Part of the same scheme is the separation of South Germany from Prussia. We see the Bavarian monarchists already busy with plans to restore the Wittelsbachs; and we may expect to hear at any time of the renewal of the plottings for the erection of a Rhine republic to take in the great industrial district. Certainly these things will be attempted if Italy can be kept from interference and Britain remains in such a state that she cannot interfere.

Weakness of Lloyd George

More than once, in bitter councils, Lloyd George has balked such designs. But he goes to Genoa shorn of much of his power. A statesman who sits in the cold and cynical game that European statesmen play must have strong cards; and support of his own people constitutes trumps. But Lloyd George goes without a really strong suit in his hand.

When he went into retirement in Wales it was with the demand that the head of Sir George Younger, the Unionist party leader, should be brot to him. He returned to find Sir George stronger than ever. In the words of American politics he had to eat crow. Another dish of the same was fed to him by Winston Churchill, when that former lieutenant, made him swallow part of his Russian policy and assent to stiff terms to be presented to the Moscow delegates.

The French are the world's best cooks; and seeing that Lloyd George has now learned to eat crow they may be depended on to serve him several dishes of it. Doubtless it will be prepared with some artful sauce; but the crow will be there; and in his present low state Lloyd George is very likely to eat it.

The British Premier will not be helped by his chief associate. Lord Curzon, the foreign minister, is one of the best hated men among European statesmen. "His overbearing manner is a by-word among his associates," says the London Times. Edward Montagu, who recently left the cabinet because of the India row, told how he had a habit of writing "hectoring, bullying letters." He was kept from going to Washington but his presence at Genoa is necessary.

With these two Britain stands little chance of restraining French plans or of composing differences among rival powers. If she cannot act as a restraining force the Genoa conference will be a failure; and before long the guns will begin talking again.

$1.00 PACKAGE OF GENUINE YEAST VITAMINE TABLETS from your druggist today.

If you are thin and emaciated and wish something to help you put on flesh and increase your weight, Yeast Vitamine Tablets should be used in connection with organic Nuxated Iron. Without organic iron, both food and Vitamines are absolutely useless, as your body cannot change inert, lifeless food into living cells and tissue unless you have plenty of organic iron in your blood. Organic iron takes up oxygen from your lungs. This oxygenated organic iron unites with your digested food as it is absorbed into your blood just as fire unites with coal or wood, and by so doing it creates tremendous power and energy. Without organic iron in your blood your food merely passes thru your body without doing you any good.

Arrangements have been made with the druggists of this city to give every reader of this paper a large $1.00 package of Genuine Yeast Vitamine Tablets absolutely free with every purchase of a bottle of Nuxated Iron.

Where Russia Comes In

THE debt of England to the United States is something more than $4,000,000,000; the debt of all the Allies, including England, is nearly $10,000,000,000; the debt of France to England is about $2,750,000,000; the debt of Germany to the Allies is about $33,000,000,000, and the wealth of European Russia is from $60,000,000,000 to as high as any one with a penchant for figures cares to put it.

Paris dispatches say that when the United States asks its interest of England, England will ask its interest of France. But France will be able to pay neither interest nor principal unless she imposes drastic new taxes or collects what is due her from Germany. She will not impose drastic taxes for the simple reason that the Fernch taxpayer will not endure them and no government could get him to pay them. Therefore, if she is to pay England, she must collect from Germany as large a part of the $17,000,000,000 which is her part of the indemnity as she can collect.

At best this will not be the whole or anything like it. But Germany cannot pay even a part unless her trade and industry are allowed to expand greatly. This is where Russia comes in. At the present moment no great country is poorer than Russia. Mistress of one of the greatest grain-producing regions on earth, she cannot even feed herself; possessed of abundant supplies of iron and coal, she cannot keep her railways running; owning vast areas of timber land, she lacks for fuel and shelter. But these conditions will not last forever.

The Cannes conference was obviously influenced by the thot that Russia, if opened to trade and development, might contribtue much toward the reconstruction of Europe. This contribution will certainly not be immediate, for the total of Rusian exports and imports last year, measured in 1913 money, was only about 1 per cent. of the 1913 total. The immediate value of Russian wealth is a pledge of future payment rather than as a source of usable goods. In other words, if Russia throws her territory open to European investment, the concessions which she will have to give in return will furnish a basis for credit, upon which a part of the German, French, and English debts can ultimately rest.

The same thing is true in its degree of nearly all central and eastern Europe. The first necessity is not a multiplication of goods, but an assurance of future production, a foundation upon which men can work and save. To furnish such a foundation is the main task of the Genoa conference.

Semenoff at Washington

IN various parts of Siberia are found the ruins of peasant huts, many reduced to ashes. The bones of peasants are strewn about where they fell. Young peasant girls have been violated and old mothers' hearts have split with agony because of the ruin wrought by bandit raids. Crippled peasants hobble about and others bear the scars inflicted by these assassin bands.

In Washington there has arrived General Gregory Semenoff, one of the most notorious leaders of these assassin bands. Representing the monarchists, landed magnates and usurers of the old regime, nevertheless Semenoff in his raids was more interested in the booty which he could gather for himself and his cut-throats. In spite of his denial he was intimately associated with Japanese commanders. Pretending to represent "order," this professional bandit kept the regions he raided in chaos and the population in terror.

We note that this creature has been received by the officials of the Russian division at the State Department. After some investigation by Federal officials they decided that this gentleman would not contaminate our "democracy" if he were admitted to the United States. So Semenoff, hated by the peasants in those regions of Siberia who know him best, has access to the press of this country.

Here he pretends to speak for the population of Siberia whom he would "liberate." Those whom he has already "liberated" lie in frozen graves or have served as carrion for wolves. Semenoff appeals for finances and volunteers for another expedition to Siberia to "realize the present aspirations of the people of Siberia." Having accomplished this he would use that region as a basis for "liberating" the whole of Russia.

"The time is ripe for action in Siberia," he announces. It was ripe when he was there, and the corpses of men, women and children he left behind are evidence of his bloody work. For those who know the career of this monster, the fact that he has access to the United States can only fill them with a sense of the hideous mockery which his words imply when they are contrasted with his shady and criminal past.

Are Wages Too High?

ONE of the most important and valuable studies of wages in the United States is that made by Basil M. Manly, former joint chairman of the War Labor Board. This study is issued in convenient pamphlet form by the People's Legislative Service, Washington, D. C., and bears the title, "Are Wages Too High?" The author defines the three standards which economists have employed in reaching an answer to this question. They are:

1. Have wages kept pace with the cost of living?
2. Are the wages of these workers a "living wage"—that is, are they sufficient to maintain a family of average size in health and reasonable comfort?
3. Have wages increased in proportion to the national productivity, when population increase is taken into account?

Manly contends that it does not follow that if wages have increased faster than the cost of living in some particular trades wages are too high. Some 20 years ago workers were notoriously sweated in some trades and underpaid. In this case it would be "necessary that their wages be advanced faster than the cost of living," or else they would be plunged back "into the abyss of sweatshop wages."

Having cleared the ground in defining the three standards, the author goes on to consider wages and the cost of living. In the first place, because of rising prices and profiteering, "the dollar as a means of maintaining a home was worth, when we entered the war in 1917, only half as much as the dollar of 1900, and by 1920 only one-third." This means a 33-cent dollar in the latter year compared with the dollar of 20 years before. An investigation of the average real wages—purchasing-power wages—in manufacturing industries for the 20-year period of 1899-1919 reveals that the real wage declined, altho the money wage increased. If it be said that there has been a small decrease in the cost of living since 1919 the answer is, Wages and the opportunity to get work have also declined.

A further analysis of the amount which workers have been underpaid brings the conclusion that in the aggregate this underpayment represents $3,556,000,000 for the 20-year period. He goes on to observe that "this three and a half billion dollars of wages, withheld from the factory workers during the last 20 years, has been the basis of thousands of the great American fortunes."

From this the author passes to a consideration of war wages. Having been an official of the War Labor Board, his experience in wage-fixing enables him to present a phase of the matter that has been overlooked. The intention of the board was to see to it that wages increased with prices, but the opposition of certain employers made it impossible to follow this policy. Wage boards lagged behind the theory. "Prices were advancing so rapidly during this period that by the time the workers got their case before the boards and secured a decision the cost of living had left the new wage scale far behind."

He considers the wages of the miners and railroad workers and summarizes his investigation by stating that "no class or group of workers have succeded in maintaining unimpaired the real value of their wages as measured by the buying power which they possessed in 1900."

New York Day-By-Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, April 8—A star's dressing room! An elaborately marcelled woman smoothing out gowns of silver, gold and lace. More like a reigning dowager than a stage dresser. Far off the faint sobbing of a muted violin and muffled beat of drums. The opening overture.

And then a honk in the areaway. A uniformed call boy throws open the door and she arrives—tossing an ermine coat to the floor as if it were a discarded flower. Frantic dabs at grease paint and powder box, snatching puffs from a cigarette with the quickness of a lizard's tongue the while.

Raps at the door. A smooth white arm snatches gay colored boxes filled with flowers. She looks only at the names on the cards and tosses them in a heap in the corner. Her eyes are fevor bright and two hectic spots flare in her cheecks.

In a few moments like a puff-ball she floats airly out before the sea of faces with a burst of hand-claps. Her name swings from lip to lip. Women suck in their breath in admiration and the eyes of the men take on a covetous gleam All spell-bound by the supreme stage illusion.

In the movies they flash back. So! I had just come to the theatre from a house in a narrow crooked street where river warehouses sprawled in a disorderly array. In a lean-to shack, bent over the river, lay a bald, hook-nosed lean jawed man—one eye socket flat and empty.

His cough could be heard above the shriek of the river craft—wharries, tugs, police cutters and steamers. All melodrama is not of the stage. Life itself is melodrama. He was the star's father. Her mother, a notorious South American procuress. But he had asked to see her—the star.

Her reply: "He can go to hell!" He died the next day. And those who say newspapers are ruthless in shattering of reputations may be interested to know. Not a New York newspaper printed the story.

I don't know why a red headed man should be any more amusing wearing a monocle than those with hair of other shades. But a monocled red-haired man was laughed at all the way up Fifth Avenue the other afternoon.

The Palm Beach crowds are back. And the migrations to Europe have set in. Most New Yorkers who flit from resort to resort tarry in town only a week when they return from Florida. The fine homes in the East Side are being boarded up for the summer. The caretakers and their families are sitting out front which means that summer is really here.

Eugene O'Neill has launched another theatrical success under the management of the Provincetown Players down in the village. The latest is called "Hairy Ape". The first was "Emperor Jones", which later moved up to Broadway and played for a season. O'Neill's "Annie Christie" is playing at still another Broadway theatre. An odd genius is this playwright who lives far away from the Rialto amid the fisherfolk. He has seen life at its crudest and his plays reflect it. Several years ago he was stricken with tuberculosis and he built a home on the Atlantic coast—rarely going anywhere or receiving visitors.

Down on Oliver street, a thorofare teeming with newly arrived Russian Jews, they hold side-walk dances nightly. The music is furnished by a mouth-organ and the participants chip in to buy lemonade and sandwiches. It is a community spirit that does not exist in any other section of New York.

CURED HIS RHEUMATISM!

"I am eighty-three years old and I doctored for rheumatism ever since I came out of the army, over 50 years ago. Like many others, I spent money freely for so-called 'cures' and I have read about 'Uric Acid' until I could almost taste it. I could not sleep nights or walk without pain; my hands were so sore and stiff I could not hold a pen. But now I am again in active business and can walk with ease or write all day with comfort. Friends are surprised at the change." You might just as well attempt to put out a fire with oil as try to get rid of rheumatism, neuritis and like complaints by taking treatment supposed to drive Uric Acid out of your blood and body. It took Mr. Ashelman fifty years to find out the truth. He learned how to get rid of the true cause of his rheumatism, other disorders, and recover his strength from "The Inner Mysteries," now being distributed free by an authority who devoted over twenty years to the scientific study of this trouble. If any reader of The Tribune and Times-Age wishes "The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism" overlooked by doctors and scientists for centuries past, simply send a post card or letter to H. P. Clearwater, No. 641-M Street, Hallowell, Maine. Send now, lest you forget! If not a sufferer, cut out this notice and hand this good news and opportunity to some afflicted friend. All who send will receive it by return mail without any charge whatever.

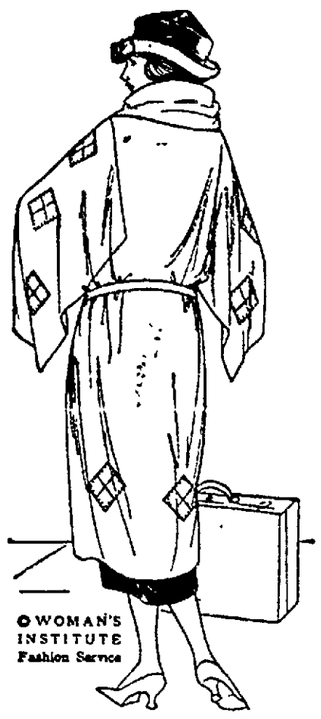
Roshanara Crepe for Smart Traveling Wrap



By MARY BROOKS PICKEN

EVIDENTLY divided in its allegiance between cape and coat lines, this model of bulrush brown Roshanara crepe contains body lines that are coat-like in character and sleeves that are veritable capes in themselves.

Notable among models developed from heavy silk crepe, of which Roshanara is one of the decided favorites, is self-trimming applied with such novel and delightful effects that Fashion does well in relying entirely on them for decoration. In this instance, the self-trimming consists of squares, each formed by four picot-edged strips of the material interlaced in lattice effect and applied in applique effect with blanket-stitching of harmonizing color.

A world of serviceability is suggested by a model such as this, for the material and cut make it entirely appropriate for many "dress-up" occasions, and yet its color, its enveloping qualities, and particularly its smartness make it a wrap of enviable distinction for traveling.

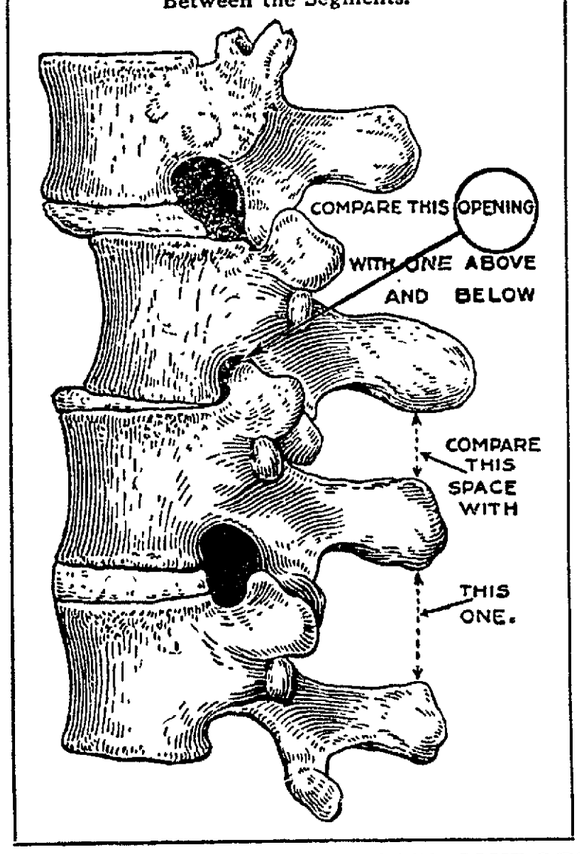
Nerve Pressure Causes Disease
MODERNIZED CHIROPRACTIC
The Science That Makes People Well and Happy

Showing How Vertebra Having Become Subluxated Results in a Smaller Opening Between the Segments.



YOU NEED NOT BE SICK

My Chiropractic Adjustments Restore Health Quickly and Permanently. You cannot get away from a weakness, some day you must fight it out where you stand or perish. Health is within your reach, now Chiropractic is mastering disease. No matter what your ailment may be don't become discouraged, if you will call at my office I will gladly tell you if Chiropractic is applicable to your case. I will make a careful analysis of your spine and tell you just what is causing your trouble. There is no charge for this service and I invite you to come. Don't wait. Come today. I WILL GIVE YOU RELIEF, if Relief is Possible.

THE HUMAN MILL

Man is a mill, filled with machines and the product of this mill is either health or disease. These various machines such as the heart, lungs, stomach, liver, spleen, bowels, kidneys, bladder, eyes, ears, arms, legs, feet, hands, fingers and toes are all operated by the same dynamo—the brain.

This dynamo, called the brain, is the instrument of the mind and again the remainder of the nervous system is the instrument of the brain. By means of the nervous system the brain sends the life current to the various machines of the body. When a certain machine of the body is out of order—sick—it is because the life current is either CUT OFF OR IMPAIRED. Under such conditions the human mill manufactures disease instead of health.

CHIROPRACTIC AS I PRACTICE IT

It is a system of drugless and knifeless treatment, by which the human machine is PROPERLY ADJUSTED.

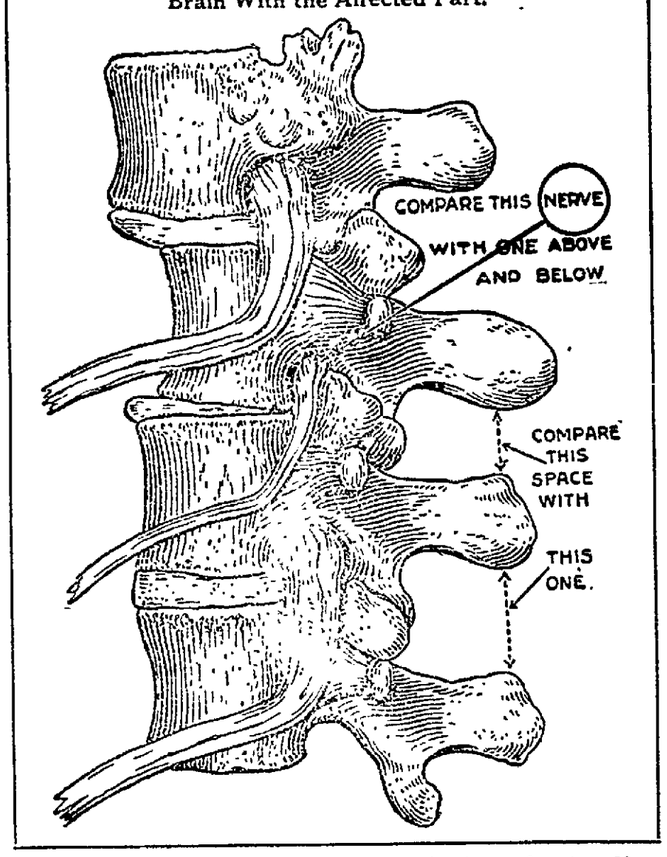
SPINE, RIBS, PELVIS AND FOOT

Those who practice Modernized Chiropractic have carried the thrust into the adjusting the ribs, pelvis, tarsal, carpal, chondral and other subluxations. No matter what the character of the subluxation may be, whether it be one of the many complicated vertebral group subluxations, or one of the many simple vertebral subluxations, or one of the different subluxations of the innominates, sacrum, coccyx, ribs, tarsal, or carpal bones, there is a corresponding character of THRUST which is most applicable in the correction of the different subluxations as they are located in the different parts of the human machine.

The proper treatment of any disease depends upon the correctness—the absolute correctness—with which the THRUST is given by the Chiropractor. This is the explanation of the HIGH CLASS RESULTS obtained by those who practice Modernized Chiropractic.

Not a day passes but I am gratified by seeing results follow my adjustments, in the many diverse ills which mankind is subject.

Showing How This Reduced Opening Chokes or Pinches the Nerve Which Connects the Brain With the Affected Part.



WHAT CHIROPRACTIC IS NOT

There is not a single massage movement that in any way resembles a Chiropractic adjustment. Not a single Swedish movement is included in a Chiropractic adjustment.

There is not a single Osteopathy movement used in giving a Chiropractic adjustment.

The giving of a Chiropractic adjustment involves a MORE RIGID diagnosis, a STRICTER and BROADER TECHNIQUE, and by far a DEEPER and MORE ACCURATE understanding of the mechanics of correction, than any of these systems or ALL OF THESE SYSTEMS PUT TOGETHER. We believe that all of these systems do good. But we further believe that, that system—Chiropractic—which is the GREATEST DEGREE is the IDEAL SYSTEM.

If you are sick and have tried every other means without relief, try my Chiropractic Adjustments and get well.

A meeting for the Board of Directors is called for Tuesday evening, at 6:25 o'clock in the Association rooms. It is hoped that all members of the Board will make a special effort to be present. The meeting will be dismissed in time for the church services.

—o—o—

Tuesday afternoon immediately following school, the Kolah club girls will meet at the Y to go for a hike into the country. In case the weather is inclement, the meeting will be held in the rooms. All Kolah girls will please be out for Tuesday.

—o—o—

An especially interesting program, "The Girls Reserves's Code," will be given in the Y. W. rooms, Wednesday, at the close of school, for the True Blue club members.

Really, girls, you don't know what you will miss if you fail to be present Wednesday. It is something you are sure to enjoy and we are eager for a 100 percent attendance.

—o—o—

The annual election of officers will follow the picnic supper for the Many-Ha Ha club girls, Thursday evening.

The meeting will be held in the rooms as usual, and it is especially necesasry that everybody make an effort to be present.

—o—o—

Be-Squares will bring their lunch to the Y rooms, Friday evening and join in with a picnic supper. Nothing elaborate, merely a get-to gether, informal social time—the kind we all like and enjoy. Remember the day and keep that evening open on your social calendar, girls.

WIFE OF OKLAHOMA JURIST AND FLYER HER HUSBAND SHOT TO DEATH

Lieutenant-Colonel Paul W. Beck, commander of Post Field, Fort Sill, Okla., was killed acidentally, asserts Judge Jean P. Day, former Oklahoma Supreme Court Justice, who is held for the slaying. Beck hid behind curtains in his Oklahoma City home, Day declares, when ordered from the residence for alleged insults to his wife.

"When I saw his bulging form behind the curtains I thot he was going to shoot," the jurist asserts "I struck him with my revolver, which was accidentally discharged, the bullet killing the flyer."

FACTORY AND COLLEGE GIRLS TO MEET

"Let's Know Each Other," Say Factory Employed Girls and College Students. Joint Convention Work

If you had bent over a boot-making machine for years with no chance of a college education, wouldn't there be a lot that you could tell a coleige girl buried away from the world on a college campus? To exchange viewpoints to their mutual satisfaction and profit, the National Student Group of the Y. W. C A. is meeting with the National Industrial Group at the coming Convention in Hot Springs, April 20th to 27th.

To the college bred girl the challenge will be to prove the meaning of her education, why and thru whose efforts she is obtaining it, and what use she means to make of it in life To her the experiences and outlook on life of her factory trained co-members, their living conditions and temptations, and their prospects for the uture will be illuminating.

The realization that the most essential elements of education can only be obtained thru experience has made college girls eager for the conferenc. Esther Banks of Piqua, Ohio, heads the executive committee of the Industrial Assembly. A Wellesley girl, Olive Golden, is on that of the Student Assembly.

Wife's Illness Has Bearing On Nichols' Political Decision

CLEVELAND, April 8.—Mrs. Hugh M Nichols, of Batavia, wife of the former chief justice of the Ohio Supreme court, is resting comfortably at a Cleveland hospital after an operation.

Mrs. Nichols has been in poor health for several months, and it is hoped that as a result of the operation she will entirely recover.

It is said in political circles here that the probably candidacy of Judge Nichols for the Democratic nomination for governor depends largely on the rapidity with which Mrs. Nichols recovers.

NEW RADIO BATTERY

A storage radio "B" battery has been recently announced by the Willard Storage Battery Company of Cleveland, Ohio. Instructions to its service stations state that production will begin at once.

A quiet "B" battery will be received by the million and more radio fans of the country with open arms. Too many of them have overhauled their receiving sets on the quest for the cause of the "noise" and finally found it in the slowly polarizing dry cells they were using on the plate circuit. The well informed know the difficulties caused by the internal action that is constantly taking place in the "B" batteries generally used at present.

A big market is assured this new rechargable "B" battery as soon as it reaches the dealers salesrooms Individual cells are enclosed in covered glass jars, each separated from its neighbors by partitions in the case. The ample space between cells prevents electrical leakage from too close contact. The well known Willard Threaded Rubber Insulation is used between plates and unusual thickness of the plates themselves gives exceptional length of service without repairs. The low demand of current with the phone circuit places in the "B" battery makes recharging seldom necessary.

Miners On March

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 8.—A march of union miners thru the heart of the Winding Gulch field to endeavor to induce the non-union miners of the district to join the U. M. W. of A. was started this afternoon.

There is no indication that this will be an armed march such as was attempted late last summer.

State police will be distributed thruout the district to care for possible disorders.

BALANCED OPERATIONS

LARGER business is the best justification for additional capital The Ulmer Mortgage Company has always had more business than it could accept. Additional capital is therefore immediately converted into earning assets.

This Company does not have to seek loans nor pay heavy sales expenses to get business. The business is ready, waiting. The money invested in a well established conservative business of this type is therefore working at a profit every day in the year. This profit is more than sufficient to pay both preferred and common stock dividends. The excess goes into surplus for the benefit of common stockholders.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

The Way "Smith" Came Back Into Madge's Life.

IT was but for a second that I stood erect, in the position to which I involuntarily had sprung when I heard the voices of the horsemen coming down the lonely wood lane.

Then, still obeying the instinctive impulse of concealment which had seized me at the sound of the second voice, I swiftly moved to the tree against which Dicky's car rested, seated myself there in such a manner that the machine almost concealed my presence, and adjusted my hat so that its brim drooped over my forehead. I thanked my little joss that my hat had a brim, and—that it was not the hat I had worn in the Catskills. With some autumn branches in my hand I made a pretense of stripping the leaves from them, but had to stop all movement and grip the branches tightly to still the trembling of my hands.

"Remember, Anton—"

For, if my ears and my memory had not deceived me, the somewhat servile voice of the second approaching horseman was that of the man Smith, whom I had last seen in the Catskill mountains, and who was now a fugitive from the justice which he had so mysteriously escaped that memorable night when our fishing party had discovered the wounded trooper in the reservoir grounds. If it were he, I knew that the servility was only assumed, that the arrogance of the man was only concealed, his cunning working swiftly and surely.

And then the two men on horseback moved into my view from the recesses of the forest path, and from underneath my hat brim I looked furtively at them.

The first man I knew, in the casual, friendly fashion of the countryside, as the "big man" of the neighborhood, a retired farmer, wealthy, public-spirited, respected and liked by his neighbors. That he could know anything of the real personality of Smith—if the second man really were Smith—was, of course, unthinkable. And that the relation between them was that of kindly efficient master and new servant, I gleaned from the elder man's words as they rode toward me.

"Remember, Anton, the one thing above all others which I will not have is brutality to animals," he was saying. "I discharged the man just before you for that."

"I will remember," Anton said slowly, and then his eyes fell on Dicky's car, and I saw him start unmistakably. I wondered if, with the keen perceptions which I guessed to be his, he had recognized the car, having remembered seeing it upon that night which had seen his exposure.

A Swift Decision.

For I had convinced myself now that beyond all doubt the man, Anton, evidently a new man-of-all-work of my neighbor, Mr. Briggs, was the same man, Smith, who had been the opulent autocrat of the Catskill mountain region in which he had his barricaded estate. And yet, barring their height, which the man, Anton, made less by appearing slightly stooped, there was little outward similarity between the two.

Smith had been a commanding figure, erect and broad-shouldered, with a well-fed appearance. This man was thin, almost to emaciation, and his clothing hung loosely on him. Smith's appearance had been that of a scrupulously fastidious man, accustomed to luxurious bathing appurtenances, who would almost have died rather than appear unshaven, a man with many changes of clothing.

"Anton" had at least a three-day's growth of beard upon his face, his clothing was grimy and hung loosely on him, and his hands were distinctly suggestive of the earth. Around his forehead he wore a dirty bandage, which, I noted with rising excitement, completely concealed his eyebrows.

I gave him another furtive but searching glance, and decided that the dirt upon his clothing and the bandage were but surface soil, that the cloth next his head was clean, and that underneath the rough garments were others, clean and fine. He was altogether too typical—he outdid his compatriots whom I had seen working in the neighboring fields.

Mr. Briggs had reined in his horse when he saw the car, and "Anton" followed his example. For a second or two they did not see me, then Mr. Briggs espied me and swept off his hat with a courteous bow.

"How do you do, Mrs. Graham?" he said heartily, adding solicitously. "I hope there is nothing wrong with your car."

I explained, conscious as I did so, that "Anton's" eyes were furtively searching my face. But I did not look toward him. I had swiftly decided that though no doubt he had recognized me, I must give him no inkling that I had any suspicion of his identity.

APRIL VOICES

WHAT is it makes even the still air these days seem vibrant with the sounds of voices? Is it the growing of the trees, the budding of leaves, the upspringing of grasses, the blossoming of flowers—singing, maybe, for very joy of growing—or are these the voices in the hearts of those who listen to the songs of love in their OWN hearts? Yet to loving, understanding eyes—so we are told—there may come visions of the elfins who hide in the trees and nestle among the flowers and who whisper and sing with joyous April voices.

YOUR HEALTH

Why Cheerful Surroundings Help to Make Your Life Useful

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
Commissioner of Health, New York City

DR. COPELAND

DID you ever drive along a country road and come to a farm where there was a long row of beautiful maples or of stately elms?

I never see such a place without having a funny little feeling in my heart. To me the row of trees tells the story of a romance.

I can imagine a homesick bride living in that house. The young couple came from some distant place to make here a pioneer home. The husband said to his tearful wife:

"Don't cry, honey, let's make this the most beautiful spot in the world!"

So he went to the forest, selected the hardy young trees, and with her help transplanted them to bower the dooryard and to make shade along the highway.

In the tangled branches of these trees innumerable generations of birds have made their nests, and perhaps the boys and girls of a score of grandchildren play in their charming shadows.

Had it not been for the physical effort, the mental stimulation and the contentment of soul resulting from this undertaking, that little bride of long ago might have sickened and died. Instead, she gained health and happiness.

We are dependent, amazingly dependent, on our immediate surroundings. Without books and pictures, a few pretty dishes and a handful of flowers or a growing plant, we would be living in gloom and misery. A few pretty things will transform the barrenness and prison-like plainness of an abiding-place into the pleasing and cheery atmosphere of a real home.

No matter how poor you may be, you should surround yourself with those inexpensive but beautifying things which please the eye and cheer the soul.

Good health cannot be had if the soul is starved. You must feed your mind and nourish your spiritual being by reading, entertainment and good company.

We live in an age when the busiest person may be enlightened and entertained. This newspaper brings the world to your door every day. The theatre brings plays of human interest. The motion picture show reveals some great historical event. The news reel gives you intimate knowledge of the current events of the entire world. The city dwellers may see the green fields and whispering woods. The rural citizens may know the life and activities of the city.

Don't permit yourself to get bored and listless. Govern your life so that you have human interests and the joy of many contacts. You cannot be healthy if you settle down to the humdrum of mere existence. If you vegetate you will die.

Wake up, shake off your monotonous life, and make yourself a useful part of this active world!

To live long you must use your life. Stimulate your heart, improve your circulation, and enliven every function by happy surroundings and an active interest in this old world.

Answers to Health Questions

T. R. Q—I am 18 years old, and am 5 feet tall, and weigh 122 pounds. Do you think there is any chance of my growing taller?

A—You may grow for several years yet. Join some athletic club or Y. M. C. A., and place yourself under the direction of a physical instructor, who will outline a course of exercises which may be beneficial to you.

• • •

M. E. K. Q—Since last July I have been troubled with a pain in my left side. Also at times I have a pain in my right side, but it is not as severe as the pain in my left side. What would you advise me to do?

A—This condition may be caused by indigestion, neuralgia or intestinal or kidney trouble. You should have a thorough examination, including a urinalysis and blood-count, in order to locate the cause of your trouble. After the cause has been located the proper treatment can be prescribed.

• • •

C. C. Q—I have a very bad breath which I believe is the result of indigestion. Will you please tell me what to do for this trouble?

A—Bad breath is often caused by bad teeth, atrophic rhinitis, or, as you say, indigestion. You should first have a thorough examination made in order to find the cause of the trouble, and then correct it. If you will restate your question and enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, full particulars on the treatment of indigestion will be furnished.

Dr. Copeland will answer for readers of this paper questions on medical, hygienic and sanitation subjects that are of general interest. Where the subject of a letter is such that it cannot be published in this column, Dr. Copeland will, when the question is a proper one, write you personally, if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is enclosed. WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT A Boy or a Girl?

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

JULIAN HUXLEY says that it isn't going to be long before we're going to be able to choose whether to have a son or a daughter.

If that's true, I wonder just how many daughters there will be in the world.

I'll tell you—just about as many as there are fathers who can vote on the question.

No—not quite that. There are men who prefer sons to daughters—before they're born. It's the old-world idea of an heir and a successor in business, and there's something sweet and protective about it, too. A man likes to think that if he should die he would leave behind him a son, not only to perpetuate his name, but to protect his son's mother when he, himself, is gone.

That's all very well for the first year or so, but have you never noticed that a man is particularly fond of his daughters when they get to be seven or eight years old? And when they're seventeen or eighteen—that's the time that Father wouldn't give one of his daughters for half a dozen sons.

Mother is just the other way around. She likes a son the best.

Oh, yes, Daughter's all right when she's little and pretty and yielding and can be dressed up and fussed over and all that. But when it comes to the 'teens—give Mother a son every day in the week. How she does love to call him rough and rude and how she glories in his roughness and rudeness even while she's scolding him about them. How proud she is of him—she can never get over the wonder of it—what, that tall, broad-shouldered, high-headed, opinionated, domineering man—her son, her little baby!

And Son is a good deal more apt to be devoted to Mother than Daughter.

Daughter and Dad—they're the pals—they are the ones with the secrets and the whisperings and the cajolements.

Doesn't It Depend—?

And, whisper, here's a strange thing—have you ever noticed it?

I never yet saw a woman jealous of her husband's love for her daughter, but I have seen more than one man jealous of his wife's love for her son. I wonder why.

The unselfish mother and the unselfish father—which will they wish for—a son or a daughter, not for their own pleasure and happiness, but for the pleasure and happiness of the child?

Which gets the most fun out of life—the man or the woman?

Do you know? Do I? Oh, of course, it is always said that men have the best of everything—but do they always—really?

Doesn't it depend entirely upon the individual?

And their wives don't do a thing but play. There's no work for them to do and there's nothing for them to worry about.

Of course, we all know women who work and worry, too, but somehow, in the natural division of things, I don't believe the man has so very much the better of it. He has more pleasure, more interest in life, and he is less tied down as a rule—so people seem to think—to tedious detail.

But, somehow, I never could see much difference between the drudgery of housekeeping and the drudgery of shop-keeping or carpentering or shoeing the horses or mending automobile tires or adding figures in a ledger all day long. The average man does his day's work because he needs the money, not because he has a thrilling time doing it.

Why shouldn't the average woman look at her day's work in the same rational, sensible, matter-of-fact way? If she did, I believe she'd get a lot more fun out of it.

There Are Still Twins

And then there is a lot of pleasure in home-making and home-keeping and a really natural woman really likes to be a woman—and wouldn't know what on earth to do with herself if she should suddenly have to turn into a man, with a man's work and a man's responsibilities and a man's somewhat dulled perceptions, to bear and make the best of.

Of course, no man in his senses would change places with a woman.

But I don't believe that any sensible woman who is also a natural, well-balanced woman, ever really wants to change places with a man, either—when you come right down to it.

A boy or a girl—if I had my choice, I'd choose them both. There are still such things in existence as twins, aren't there?

HOME-MAKING HELPS

"Everything About the House Helps to Make the Home"

By WANDA BARTON

How to Give a "Bridal-Slipper" Luncheon.

THIS function is for the bridesmaids and matrons or maids of honor, and is given by the prospective bride. As these women are usually the most intimate friends of the bride, they may get a peep at the wedding finery, and a look at the presents that have arrived.

The bride, if she intends to go to housekeeping, should in the note of invitation ask each friend to bring her favorite recipe, and she has a book ready to copy or paste them in. These are especially desirable to have if the bride happens to be going away to another city to live.

The bridegroom-to-be is supposed to furnish not only the bridal bouquet, but the flowers the bridesmaids carry as well, and this luncheon is an appropriate time to decide upon whether they shall consist of bouquets, flat baskets carried on the arm with ribbon ties, wreaths of spring flowers carried by ribbon loops, or bridal slippers made of fine white flowers and leaves with big satin rosettes on the toes. Bridal-slipper bouquets are still favored by brides, though flat baskets carried by ribbon loops over the arm are charming, and leave the hands free to remove the glove for the ring.

It is customary for the bride to give her maids any little extras that their toilets may require, providing she is able to do so. If not, it is in much better taste to choose simpler gowns, something which they may wear afterward, so that their outlay will not be too great. The all-white wedding often makes this impossible, as the gowns and hats are apt to be made alike, which makes them marked when they next appear. Under these circumstances a pastel wedding, where each maid has a gown of delicate color, is preferable, for the gowns may appear afterward with the addition of a sash or flowers and be quite individual.

When all these points have been decided, and the bride's pretty things have been inspected, the party spend the rest of the afternoon helping address the wedding invitations, a task which is generally performed at the bride's home. Sometimes the ushers and groom drop in for tea and assist in the work. The luncheon is an early one to help along the good work.

The luncheon table should be all white with white cloth and napkins, and in the centre a big white bridal slipper of flowers, paper, silk or satin may be placed. Nearly all favor shops make the slippers to order. The souvenirs are placed in the slipper, and are attached to narrow white ribbons which hang over the edge. Beside each plate a small slipper may be used for salted nuts. The place cards are hand-painted, white butterflies attached to the rims of the water-glasses. Above the table a wedding bell of flowers—paper flowers or tulle with a ribbon-rose clapper—may be hung.

The menu should not exceed five courses, and should be made up of light rather than of hearty foods. An appropriate menu might consist of bouillon, a dainty fish ramekin or croquette, broiled chicken or sweetbreads fried or creamed, with peas or mushrooms, a fancy salad, ice cream frozen in small slipper moulds, and little cakes. Cocoa, coffee or tea may be served.

This menu is quite sufficient. Little hot rolls are always a welcome addition, especially if they are home-made, and any fancy dessert may be substituted for the ice cream.

If a number of people are to address envelopes for the invitations it is a good idea to have, say, four lists, and insist that each letter addressed is checked on the list. This plan saves confusion, and some may stamp while others address.

No extra entertainment will be required for the guests, for it is in a way a business luncheon, and the work planned will take up all the available time. The bride's mother usually sits at the head of the table, and the bride opposite her, which facilitates service. Where this is impossible, the matron of honor sits in the mother's place.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

We are twin orphans, aged 17, and are considered quite beautiful by our friends. Our trouble is very poignant, and quite different from the letters of your other correspondents.

We are both in love with the same young man, and he in turn cannot decide which of us he loves the better, as we are very similar in appearance and personality.

We were very happy before this young man came into our village, but now it seems we cannot agree on anything.

Every time he takes the one out he takes the other also. We can never have him for ourselves. He does everything fairly, even the kissing end of it.

Please tell us who shall have him.

THE SIAMESE TWINS.

THE SIAMESE TWINS: You may be sure, my dears, that the young man is not in love with either of you girls if he pretends to love you both, and makes love to you both. The best thing for you to do is to consider him as a friend, and to forget about being in love with him.

It is very improper and unwise for you to allow any young man to whom you are not engaged to kiss you.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her, in care of this office.

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

She Describes a Smart Spring Suit of Blue and Yellow Kasha Cloth.

IT had been a long time since Judith Smith took me on a tour with her. Judith writes for a fashion paper, and I am always interested in going with her when she gets stories.

"I want to see some things of other designers, Judith," I said to her over the 'phone.

"You haven't been with me since I bought that chenille dress that has been such a joy," she answered. "When can you come again? You seem to bring me very good luck."

"I should like to come any time I may," I answered.

"Splendid! Get your wraps and I'll come by for you," she returned promptly.

"I'm going to one of the exclusive shops to see some suits they've imported," she explained.

"I should like to see them," I answered. "They will probably be of kasha, and I think it's the most attractive material we've had in years."

"Yes, this house is making a specialty of kasha suits, and they are so lovely. The new colors are charming."

We were soon seated in a gray-and-blue salon waiting for the models to show us the things. The Frenchman who designed the things stood about telling Judith interesting points to include in her story.

"This is one of our smartest. It has just come from the workrooms," he said, as a lovely cadet blue and yellow creation came in sight.

"I've seen very little striped kasha, and it is most effective," said Judith, examining the soft fabric as the model paused before her.

The skirt was blue striped in yellow, and the solid blue coat was trimmed in yellow striped bandings.

"Aren't those straight side panels which loop under the hem effective in working out the color combination?" said Judith, as she made a hasty pencil sketch so as to call the suit to mind when she wrote the description.

"Yes, they are," I conceded. "And, better still, they give the much-wanted slender line," I added with a knowing air.

But it was the hat which gave the costume its perfect finish. I was studying it with an admiring glance.

"As vari-colored as the lights in a prism, isn't it?" observed Judith, as she noted the direction of my glance.

"How is it made?" I asked.

"Of wool cords which entirely cover the surface and end in this little tassel off the side," Judith answered.

"It is very effective," I remarked.

"Yes," agreed Judith. "A hat of that kind would be lovely with so many different things."

"I can see it now with a white sports costume. It would lend the needed color to make a simple kasha suit the perfect thing for a spring afternoon," I observed.

The model verified my words by appearing soon in a white kasha suit with the same hat to top it off. The effect was truly stunning.

Straight Side Panels Give a Slender Line to This Suit.

HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SUNDAY AND MONDAY, APRIL 9

Sunday's astrological map is rather unpropitious with the reign of Saturn pointing to depression, worry and physical ills. It may be a serious day, on which little progress may be looked for. Protect the health of the family. Those whose birthday it is have the prospect of a year of annoyance, in which the health should receive first consideration. A child born on this day is likely to be sullen and melancholy unless given an optimistic outlook by early training in cheerfulness.

Monday's horoscope is a most encouraging one, with the great benefic Jupiter, in conjunction with Luna, a presage of prosperous and expansive conditions, with gain in business and fortune. It may be advisable, however, to shun the lure of pleasure and society, as these may wean from the paths of success and achievement.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of progress and financial increase if they do not allow the lure of pleasure or society to interfere. A child born on this day will be proud, generous and enterprising, but it may be inclined to worry unless it is very carefully trained early in life in optimism.

ARMY PILOTS FLY TO INQUEST OVER SLAIN COMMANDER

OKLAHOMA, CITY, Okla., April 8—Flying against a drizzling rain and sometimes a downpour from the low hanging clouds, eight airplanes spread in battle formation, swept into Oklahoma City this morning.

Their oil-spattered pilots gave 'em the gun, determined to win their fight on a battlefield new to them—the civilian court room, where the body of their slain commander, Lieut. Col. Paul Ward Beck, lay in inquest.

Day's story is an age-old tale—a story of misplaced trust. Day, it is believed will not change his story before the inquest. He will insist that he found Beck attacking his wife and that Beck was killed by accident when Day dealt him a blow over the head with a revolver. It is to refute this story the airmen who served under Beck's command at Fort Sill aviation field have come to the inquest. They are headed by Beck's son and by his nephew, Lieut John W. Beck, whose father—Col. Beck's brother, was slain under mysterious circumstances several years ago.

One of the largest crowds ever attending a court of inquiry here is expected to seek admittance to the inquest room.

Twelve witnesses have been called. Day himself will testify. His wife also will tell of the events preceding the tragedy. She will say, however that from the moment she saw her husband, revolver in hand, her mind is a blank as to the actual shooting of the airman.

Mrs. Rachael Beck, 77 years old, mother of the slain man, arrived for a last view of her son's body this morning. She was accompanied by the wives of army officers from Fort Sill.

"It is not true—it cannot be true," Mrs. Beck said, crying softly. "My boy could not do the things they say."

The airman's mother is a tragic figure. Her years rest heavily upon her. Her life has been a series of tragedies —"Tragic milestones which dot my weary path."—she said.

A pioneer of the early west—an army man's wife, Mrs. Beck settled at Fort Sill. Her husband died. Then she weded Brig. Gen. William Beck.

"They have told me what is being said of my boy," Mrs. Beck said. "They tried to keep it from me, but some day I would have heard, and it must not be from the lips of those who loved me.

"I must cry a little, but I'll try—Oh I'll try so hard to be the kind of mother he would want me to be," and the little grey mother smothered the tears in her eyes.

She will accompany her son's body to Washington Sunday. She will see it placed beside the grave of his father in Arlington cemetery.

Mrs Beck will not attend the inquest. It was expected that the jury would return a verdict urging that prosecution against Judge Day be dropped.

Food Traditions.

Just as in England turkey and plum puddings and ices are supposed to suggest a festive occasion, so in America turkey and chicken and ice cream are festive dishes. The difference is that turkey and chicken are more festive than in England, while ice cream is less so. For gala occasions the ice cream sundae and other varieties, such as the "parfait," the peach Melba, and so on, are forthcoming. But while they are the stock festival dishes, they are taken very much for granted. Turkey, on the other hand, meets with a vast amount of appreciation; while chicken would be a state dish were it not used so often. Americans love a chicken, and they have subtle distinctions of white and dark meat and "second joints," which are different, but correspond to, the wing and the breast of the British chicken. These are, so to speak, standard foods, and there is associated with them a sort of tradition which, as in the case of any special food, can be counted upon to make them taste as they should.

6TH ST. THEATRE

"THREE WISE FOOLS"

John Golden, who has leaped in six short years of activity to the front rank of theatrical producers, will present the finest comedy he has ever had, "Three Wise Fools," by Austin Strong at the Sixth Street Theatre, Tuesday April 11th. His sensational debut as a manager with the immortal "Turn to the Right" at the Gaiety Theatre, New York has brot him another immense return when he sold the comedy to the motion pictures for three quarters of a million dollars, retaining half the property and the spoken drama rights. This sensation had lived a season when he followed at the Gaiety with his greatest comedy, "Lightnin," which has completed the phenomenal world's record of three years and a day, and went to the Blackstone Theatre, Chicago, with 1,291 performances to its credit. "Dear Me," and "The First Year" are others of his unbroken list of hits.

COOPER FAMILY IN HOSPITAL THAT IS PARTLY DESTROYED

Frances Cooper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Cooper, 334 Hamilton-av, received a newspaper from Rochester, Minnesota, Saturday, which carried the details of a $25,000 fire that raged in the Colonial hospital building where her father, mother and little sister are confined.

It happened that the fire broke out in the top story of the hospital and was kept from the other floors. Mr. and Mrs. Cooper and the daughter, Edith, are located on the second floor of the building. None of the patients were injured, according to the story.

The fire occurred Wednesday. Mr. Cooper was operated upon for acute appendicitis Tuesday. Last word from the Coopers was that all were doing well.

Making Good an Old Boast.

A process has been discovered whereby old leather can be converted into gelatin. Such transformation offers a ready way of utilizing many articles after their value to every one but the junk man appears to be gone. Since head coverings are sometimes made of leather, it would appear that at least the man confident that his candidate will win in an election may literally back up his confidence with the time-honored promise that he will eat his hat in the event that his man loses.

TROOPS DENIED IN COAL STRIKE ZONE

WASHINGTON, April 8- The first request for federal troops to maintain order in a coal strike zone in the present strike was turned down today by the government.

The request came from Gov. Mechem of New Mexico He asked Secretary Weeks for the soldiers in the region around Gallup where some disorders and shooting have occurred

At a conference between Attorney Weeks and President Harding at the white house this afternoon, the notice of refusal was given out.

The same policy will be followed with regard to any similar requests from other states, Secretary Weeks announced on leaving the white house. States must first demonstrate their inability to preserve order within their borders before federal troops will be sent to assist, said Secretary Weeks. This applies to all states.

Death Valley Once Bed of Lake.

In support of the view that Death valley in California was formerly the bed of a lake, is the discovery of traces of an ancient water line running along the flanks of the inclosing mountains at a height of 600 feet. The bottom of the valley is 200 feet below sea level. The winds from the Pacific cross four ranges of mountains before reaching the valley, and by that time they have been drained of their last drop of moisture. It is said that no spot on earth surpasses Death valley in aridity or Tophet-like heat. The lake that once filled it is believed to have been fed by a river which has now also vanished. The borax deposits of Death valley are commercially important, but labor is all but impossible in a place where to be without water for a single hour in summer means death.

COAL STRIKE HITS YOUNGSTOWN HARD

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, April 8—The coal strike is being felt with greater force daily in the Youngstown steel district as the non-union mines in the Connellsville district are gradually being closed down.

Orders have been received at Farrell works cancelling resumption of operation of the Carnegie Farrell works scheduled to commence Monday. Bar and blooming mills and eleven open hearth furnaces were to have started work employing 1,400 men. Reports are to the effect that production will be resumed when the strike is ended. The strike has also caused postponement of resumption of many departments at the Republic Iron & Steel and the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. plants here.

Little Dissertation on Gossip.

Western Paper—Gossip is a humming bird with eagle wings and a voice like a foghorn. It can be heard from Dan to Beersheba and has caused more trouble than all the fleas, ticks, mosquitoes, coyotes, rattlesnakes, cyclones, earthquakes, blizzards, gout and indigestion that this United States has known or will know when the universe shuts up shop and begins the final inventory. In other words, it has got both war and hell backed up in a corner yelling for ice water.—Boston Transcript.

Traced Through Correspondence.

Lawyers and others whose business it is to find missing heirs to unclaimed fortunes declare that women are much more difficult to trace than men, owing to their change of name at marriage. They are, however, more ready to keep up correspondence with girl friends of their youthful days, and they often have cause to bless these old remembrances.

FOUR
The Significance of Reserve Power

There is a real significance in the spectacular Hollywood climb and other similar performances of the Oldsmobile "4" on many of America's famous hills.

The very reserve of power that these performances indicate makes that highly desirable margin of safety and convenience — in spurting from low throttle to speedy acceleration over a busy crossing, in swinging from the slow turn into a quick straightaway, or in any of a hundred emergencies that one encounters in daily driving.

The fine appearance of the Oldsmobile "4" you get at a glance. Its distinction stands out in the thickest traffic. In the first few minutes of driving you feel the pleasure and the ease of its unusual riding qualities.

But most of all, it is the reserve of power that breeds increasing confidence and pride in the liveliness and energy of this motor as the miles pile up.

This splendid surplus of power is an index of the fine engineering and scrupulous manufacturing that distinguish the Oldsmobile "4" as a value extraordinary in a market where values are appraised with greater keenness and discernment than ever before.

Alan's Business Opportunity

By WINIFRED DUNBAR

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

A nod or a shake of the head was the invariable rule with John Dorsett in business dealings. Just now he had applied these definite tactics in a transaction of love.

"You won't consider it, Mr. Dorsett?" almost plaintively interrogated his visitor, Alan Barrett.

Again the shake of the head, and the keen old merchant drew some papers across the desk as if to indicate that the incident was closed and that he wished to get back to his own personal business.

The younger man seemed dreadfully depressed and hopeless.

"Why can't I have your daughter, Mr. Dorsett?" he demanded.

"You will have it out with me, will you?" inquired bluff, almost cruel John Dorsett. "Well, I'll tell you. My daughter Blanche has been used to luxury. What have you to offer?"

"I have a fairly good position, $10,000 invested in bonds and some inheritance prospects."

"Bah!" railed the old tyrant. "Your cash would just about cover the kind of a wedding my Blanche must have. As to the rest of it—waiting for dead man's shoes is a poor business. It's the man I'm looking at—no No. 5½ hat wearer for my son-in-law! I don't care how poor he may be, for I have plenty of money, and to spare, but he's got to have business sense. He's got to do something worth while, which would show that with mature years he would be a business success."

"I am doing my full duty in the humble position I occupy," declared Alan rather indignantly.

"Then make some opportunities outside of it to show your mettle," advised the merchant.

Ting-a-ling-ling!

There was an interruption. Mr. Dorsett picked up the telephone receiver. Some urgent call summoned him to another part of the building. He made such haste that he neither asked Alan to go nor stay. Alan sat staring vaguely at a full-page advertisement in a daily paper. It announced that Dorsett & Co. would present a 12 by 20-inch American flag free to each visitor of the next day; that following was a patriot local holiday. This was one of the catch trade opportunities that had built up the great mercantile house.

Ting-a-ling-ling!

Again the telephone. There was no one to reply. Alan hesitated. Then he picked up the receiver

"Dorsett & Co.?—yes. This is the Eastern Central freight house. Car of twenty thousand flags, shipped from Springfield to you, derailed and burned up last night. Have notified the shippers, Continental Flag Co."

"Hello!" ejaculated Alan, "this seems to be one of Mr. Dorsett's big opportunities sidetracked: What will he do now? Sa-ay!"

He called up Springfield and the Continental Flag company. Could they ship per express on quick order twenty thousand 12 by 20 American flags? Thought not. Large order sold day before and stock rather low. Would look up stock and odd lots, however.

Then later. Yes, could make up the order. Then ship to—and Alan gave his address.

Alan went straight back to the office of the prospective father-in-law.

"Why, Alan!"

He found Blanche at the office. She seemed tearful, as if she had been pleading with her hard-hearted father. The latter scowled fearfully at Alan, jabbing a telegram before him with a pen.

"Well young man," he growled, "I see you're here again?" and then he turned to speak to his manager whom he had evidently just sent for.

"See here, Barnes," he said sharply, exhibiting the telegram from Springfield. "All those flags we ordered burned up in a wreck. Get your men out at once, no matter what the pay, we must have the flags we advertised. Dorsett & Co. never yet failed in a promise to the people. They mustn't do it now."

"I doubt if you can pick up five hundred in the whole market," submitted the manager.

"One word, Mr. Dorsett," broke in Alan—"perhaps I can help you out in your dilemma."

"You!"

"Yes, sir. I have twenty thousand 12 by 20 flags for sale."

"What are you doing with twenty thousand flags?" demanded the amazed merchant.

"Why, I learned there was a shortage in the goods today and a large demand tomorrow, so I—invested."

"When did you learn it?" challenged Mr Dorsett, bristling up suspiciously.

"Through your telephone, an hour since. You taught me the principle of capturing opportunities—I have tried to follow your advice. You can have those twenty thousand flags, Mr. Dorsett, at fifty dollars a thousand."

"What! Double the market price?"

"That is the penalty of being caught napping."

Mr. Dorsett waved his manager from the room. Then he started to leave himself.

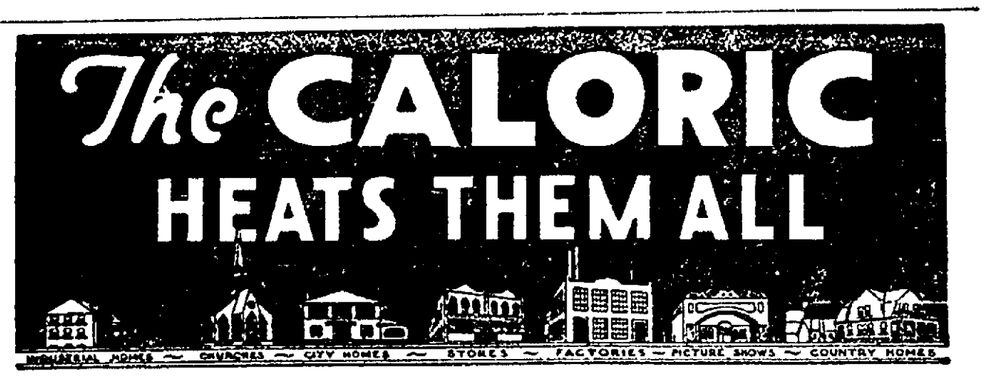
"Young man," he said to Alan, "you've made a very good showing and seem to know how to improve an opportunity when the occasion arises. You may come up to the house to see Blanche once in awhile."

And when he had gone away Alan embraced the blushing lovable opportunity at his side. And before they parted the wedding date was all but named.

Cause of Farsightedness.

Farsightedness is caused by an abnormal flatness of the lens of the eye or a defect of the eyeball that increases the focal length of the lens and causes parallel rays from a distant object to come to a focus beyond the retina.—Popular Science Monthly.

The CALORIC HEATS THEM ALL



Homes, stores, churches, factories—all over the country—are being heated more comfortably and at less cost with the Caloric pipeless furnace.

The Caloric delivers practically 100% of the heat from the fuel directly into your rooms, and at the same time withdraws the cool air from the building. This establishes a natural air circulation, with the result that the building is heated more uniformly and fuel consumption is cut ⅓ to ½. There are now

OVER 135,000 CALORIC USERS

—in every state in the Union, in Canada, Alaska—and many in this locality.

Here a word of warning. Caloric success has been so revolutionary that it has aroused opposition from those who profit from making and selling out-of-date heating systems. The result is that many imitation pipeless furnaces have been put out which are failures. Be not misled by these failures. Most of them were designed to be failures—and have been marketed in vain attempts to discredit the rapidly-growing Caloric idea.

RESIDENTS UNITE IN CLEAN-UP WORK AT NELLIE SCHOOL

Today the Nellie school grounds are no longer the eyesore of that village.

Under the direction of Mayor Nellie D. Moore, of Nellie, one hundred and seven residents of that village and of the vicinity participated in a general clean-up of the Nellie public grounds, Friday afternoon. It was Community Day in Nellie

Since the Nellie school was remodeled five years ago, the grounds have been neglected and as a result a large composite of debris was allowed to collect on the grounds. The school board was financially unable to have the debris removed. Soil, bowlders, gravel and other debris were removed from the grounds.

The credit is due to Mrs. Moore, the village mayor, for this movement. She named Friday as Community Day in Nellie. Mrs. Moore, the citizens, pupils and teachers under the supervision of T. E. Barnes combined forces in clearing the grounds.

At noon yesterday, the ladies under Mrs. Moore's direction prepared an appetizing dinner for the participants in the clean-up.

As a resul of their efforts, forty yards of the street was crowned and graded and the playground of 4 acres was smoothed and leveled.

Those who participated in the community affair yesterday are: Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Huff, Mr. and Mrs D. H Johnston, Mr .and Mrs. U. S. Moore, Rev. and Mrs. A. C. Coldiron, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Darling, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spang, Ed. Crago, Mr .and Mrs. T. E. Barnes, Norvill Huff, Virginia Moore, Fred Darling, M. L. National Emblems.

The rose, England's national flower, was chosen as the country's symbol at the close of the War of the Roses. The shamrock is firmly imbedded in Irish hearts because St. Patrick used it to illustrate one of his sermons. The thistle was adopted as the national emblem of Scotland because, in the reign of Malcolm II, a moat filled with thistles saved a Scotch fortress from Danish invasion.

We Know Batteries Like a Book!

Repairing batteries may look easy —but it isn't!

To be successful, a repair man has to know just how to handle the plates that hold the active material that keeps life in the battery. He has to know how to take care of the insulators that keep the plates apart. He has to know when it is cheaper for you to buy a new battery than to have the old one repaired.

Bring your battery in to Headquarters—no matter whether it's a Willard or not. We'll tell you what it needs, if anything, how much the cost will be—and whether repairs will pay or not.

STATE OFFICIALS CALL FOR CENSUS OF SCHOOL PUPILS

Taking of the census of all the school children in the county under the age of 18 will be started immediately, according to an announcement from the office of L. C. Shaw, county superintendent of schools, Saturday.

The census is taken annually, under the direction of the school attendance officer. The enumerators are chosen and compensated by the local board of education.

A list of suggestions to aid with the work has been received from the state director of education by the county superintendent. He suggests that the teachers of each school take a census of the pupils in that school which can be later checked up with the results gotten by the regular enumerator.

Renters seeking vacant houses, might do well to make the acquaintance of the enumerators as they are named, for the latter are required to note the location of all unoccupied houses in their district.

It is necessary to start work on the census immediately, according to Superintendent Shaw, because nearly half of the country schools end the term April 21.
